Food price spiral blamed on unions

Researchers for the $3 million legislative inquiry into the food industry say unions rather than monopoly control are to blame for high food prices.

The research group for the select standing committee on agriculture released a report Monday that notes two wholesalers — Kelly Douglas and H.Y. Louie — control 93 per cent of the province's wholesale food trade.

But monopoly control is not a matter of pressing concern in its impact on retail prices, the report concludes.

To create a more competitive climate, the report says, the government should:

—Let retailers and wholesalers hire temporary help during strikes.

—Disallow the secondary picketing provisions of the labor code.

—Prevent shopping centre owners from imposing restrictive leasing arrangements that keep malls free of competing stores.

—Ask the consumer and corporate affairs ministry to start monitoring retail food prices.

"The largest operating cost (of retailers) is associated with labor, with over half of a retailer's gross margin being used to cover wages, salaries and fringe benefits," the report says.

"Because of potential disruptions to the established shopping habits of his clientele, when a retailer is faced with union negotiations, in spite of a desire to hold costs down, it may be more desirable to settle at whatever cost rather than incur financial loss due to store closure during a strike.

"In recent years, the length of union contracts and the time lapse between settlements of union contracts for different unions — that is, union locals in different areas of the province — has shortened considerably.

"Thus, the first major retailer who has to settle a union contract is virtually assured that his competitors will likewise have to settle union contracts at the same level and within a relatively short period of time."

Because one major retailer, Woodward's Stores, is not unionized, complete bargaining solidarity in the retail food business does not exist, the report says.

As a result, an incentive exists to settle wage negotiations at whatever level is necessary, with consumers forced to suffer resulting increases in food costs.

"That's typical, isn't it?" said Meatcutters' Union business agent Leif Hansen.

Hansen said today he has not had an opportunity to read the report, but indicated his union isn't going to lose too much sleep over the suggestions.

"Our worry is that this thing will get blown out of proportion," he said.

Hansen refused to comment further until he's had a chance to analyze the findings.

The legislative committee which commissioned the series of reports — there were nearly 100 in all — has been inoperative since the spring.

The Socred committee chairman, Len Bawtree, was defeated in the May 10 provincial election and no new committee was formed.

Much of the researchers' material was discredited by people involved in the industry and by the NDP members of the committee who boycotted some of the committee's last meetings.

Few if any of the recommendations contained in the series of reports from the $3 million, two-year study were ever acted on.

Mexico border earthquake sways skyscrapers in L.A.

Times News Services

A powerful earthquake struck southern California and part of Mexico on Monday, buckling buildings, wrecking water systems and swaying skyscrapers as far away as Las Vegas and Los Angeles. At least 76 persons were injured, authorities said.

One death was reported in Mexicali, Mexico, but there were no confirmed reports of deaths in California. The five-second earthquake was the strongest in the Imperial Valley since 1940, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

Seismologists at California Institute of Technology in Pasadena said the 4:16 p.m. quake, measuring 6.4 on the Richter scale and centred 16 kilometres east of Calexico, Calif., on the Mexican border, was followed by a series of aftershocks measuring more than 3.0 on the Richter scale. The National Earthquake Centre in Golden, Colo., measured the major quake at 6.5.

The earthquake was felt as far north as Los Angeles, 240 kilometres from the epicentre — jostling the 62-storey United California Bank building downtown — and in the high-rise hotels on the Las Vegas Strip.

El Centro Police Sgt. Max Richardson and Imperial County sheriff's deputies said at least 60 persons with minor injuries were being treated at three hospitals — Calexico, El Centro Community and Pioneer Memorial hospitals in nearby Brawley.

The Imperial County fire department declared a state of emergency. At least 20 rural bridges were reported wrecked in the valley, and the roofs of many houses collapsed.

Everett Blizzard, deputy director of the state Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento, said there was "major damage" to the All-American Canal. The canal is a major supplier of water for the region's crops.

Across the border in Mexicali a Red Cross official said one person was killed and 16 others were injured.

At about the same time, a moderate earthquake rocked Kyoto and its vicinity halting the service of "bullet trains" between the ancient Japanese city and Tokyo. There were no reports of casualties or property damage.

Supertanker oil disaster 'now certain'

Times News Services

An oil spill on the British Columbia coast from Alaska oil supertankers is now inevitable, John Fraser, federal environment minister, said Monday.

The risk of a major spill off the West Coast increased dramatically Monday when Foothills Oil Pipe Line Co. decided to pull out of a competition to transport Alaskan oil to the United States, he said.

Foothills told the National Energy Board at hearings in Vancouver that it is withdrawing its overland pipeline proposal because there were too many objections to be ironed out in time for President Jimmy Carter to make his choice.

The Calgary-based company proposed a pipeline route along the Alaska Highway from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Edmonton and then Chicago.

Prime Minister Clark told the Commons today he regrets Foothills' decision.

Foothills withdrew its proposal about the same time as an announcement in Washington that U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is putting his support behind use of tankers to move the oil to the U.S. and is rejecting pipeline routes through Canada.

In favoring the Northern Tier Pipeline option, which Canada opposes on environmental grounds, Andrus fell in with the U.S. departments of energy and agriculture, two northern states, and at least 66 congressmen.

President Carter, who meets with Clark next month in Ottawa, must make the final decision, but the odds now are heavily stacked in Northern Tier's favor.

A common theme among the project's supporters is that the pipeline, with a $1.6 billion price tag, assures "security" of supply because it does not pass through Canadian territory.

Of the three companies battling for the right to move the oil, only Foothills had proposed a total overland route. The other two — Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. Ltd. of Canada and the U.S.-based Northern Tier — propose moving oil by tanker from Alaska to Washington.

Oil tankers already sail West Coast waters, but "environmental hazards obviously go up if you increase the tanker traffic," Fraser said. "The only thing remaining is the question of what is the best for Canada — Trans Mountain or Northern Tier?"

"In my opinion, Northern Tier is the worse of those two options."

Fraser said the Northern Tier plans calls for supertankers to enter the Strait of Juan de Fuca, between the

Tidal waves drown 9

NICE (UPI) — Two tidal waves struck the French Riviera Tuesday, drowning at least nine persons and tearing hundreds of pleasure boats from their moorings.

The waves occurred after the sea abruptly pulled back more than 350 yards from the coastline and then swept back to shore with a rush. They were believed caused by an underwater landslide offshore that was touched off by heavy rains that swelled the Var River, according to officials.

In Nice, 11 construction workers building a shipyard were swept into the sea. The bodies of eight were recovered.

The waves caused havoc among hundreds of pleasure craft along a 36-mile stretch of Mediterranean coast from Menton, near the Italian border, to Antibes. At least 12 boats were tossed onto a highway bordering the coastline. Hundreds of other boats were ripped from moorings.

Pilot, both passengers killed in Cessna crash

The bodies of three Victoria residents were found Monday at the scene of an air crash at the 5,000 feet level of an unnamed mountain east of Powell River.

Dead are the aircraft's pilot, Rev. Donald Moe, and passengers Mary Ellen Kingsfield and Valerie Wuerch.

All were members of the Church of the Way, 1176 Craigflower, and were on a flight from Victoria to Campbell River to establish a new church in the north Vancouver Island community.

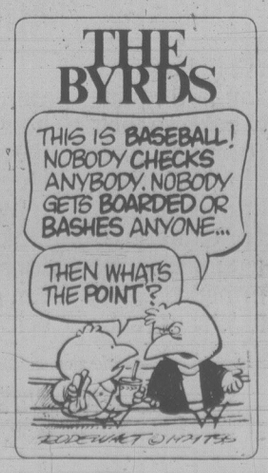
The plane was reported missing Sunday after it left on the one-hour flight.

It was due to land at Campbell River at 11 a.m. The wreckage was spotted about 9 a.m. on Monday.

Aircraft from 442 and 407 squadrons at CFB Comox took part in the search.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre said weather in the area was partly cloudy with rain showers and some fog over the Strait of Georgia.



Poor example

LONDON (AP) — The Financial Times says a 13-year-old boy at Eton, one of Britain's most important prep schools, wrote the following lines about poverty as part of a class assignment: "There was once a very poor family. The father was poor, the mother was poor, the children were poor. Even the butler was poor."

The Irish are pigs, says the princess

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Princess Margaret has made a second royal gaffe during her Chicago visit, calling the Irish "pigs" in front of the city's Irish mayor, Jane Byrne, according to the Sun Times.

The newspaper said the princess was seated at the same table as Mrs. Byrne at a weekend party when the mayor mentioned she had attended the funeral of Lord Louis Mountbatten, assassinated by the Irish Republican Army. Mountbatten was a relative and beloved figure of British royalty.

MARGARET

Princess Margaret said: "The Irish. They're pigs."

Then, catching herself, she added: "Oh-oh, you're Irish."

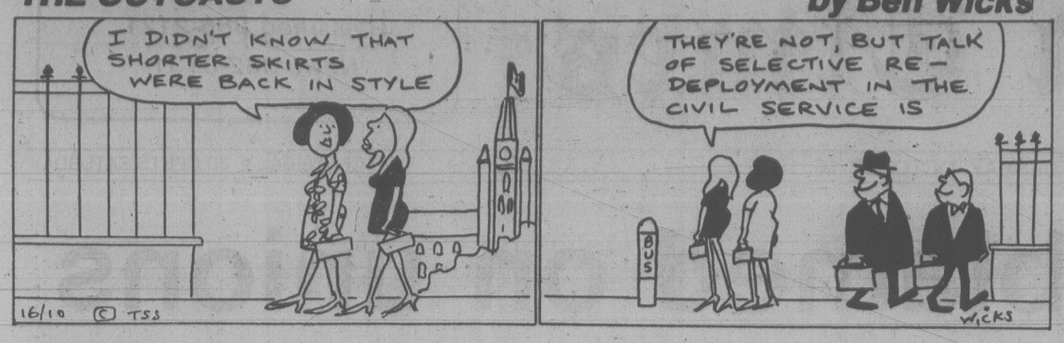
The mayor was not available for comment.

The newspaper reported Monday that Princess Margaret, when talking at a media reception Friday, asked if Richard Daley were still mayor of Chicago. Daley, mayor for 21 years, died in December, 1976. Mrs Byrne was elected last April.

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks



Debtors pay smelly Andy

LONDON (CP) — Andy Smulian has a date with the Bow Street magistrates, set for Nov. 12, and it's something to do with his job.

The charge is "insulting behavior likely to cause a breach of the peace," but, British law being what it is, he can't talk about the charge at this point.

Andy is a Smelly Tramp, from the organization of the same name and his motto is "pay up or throw up."

It's a collection agency, the brainchild of magazine editor Peter Stokes, who owes it all to a tramp who walked past him upwind in Dublin one day.

"Just the sort of person to collect debts," Stokes mused.

It might have ended there, had not Stokes come up about half a column short for his magazine Entrepreneur and wrote a piece on the idea.

"Suddenly we were inundated with people asking us to collect debts for them," says Diane Weller, advertising director.

Stokes inaugurated the service at £30 ($80) a shot, through an associate company called London Manhattan.

"At first, to make the smells, we let fish go rotten and sewed them into the lining of a tramp's coat," Diane says.

The idea was that the tramp would toddle around to the debtor's office and sit in the anteroom. He stayed there until the proprietor came up with a cheque.

In the beginning, there were problems.

In the first place, not everyone can do the job and it wasn't until Andy, a bachelor, happened on the scene with his special talent — blocked sinuses — that the idea got off the ground.

Then again, the fish didn't have the staying power, so Andy had a talk with his old chemistry teacher.

"The formula?" Smulian asks.

"Compost in plastic bags and further treated by a laboratory in Ealing. It is absolutely non-toxic."

The goop he pours over his ragged garments and torn shoes "is in liquid form."

"I dilute it as necessary," he says.

Says Diane:

"Our tramp has never had to wait anywhere for more than half an hour. The staff threatens to leave if the management won't pay."

Touch of Harrods in Arabia

LONDON (UPI) — Harrods, the British department store synonymous with elegance and good taste, is about to be transplanted to Saudi Arabia — in spirit, if not in name.

A firm of London shopfitters and designers, City Industrial Ltd., said Monday a consortium of Saudi businessmen had hired the company to produce a copy of Harrods, on about a half scale size, in the sands of Saudi Arabia.

"They wanted the same atmosphere, the general look, the merchandise," said City Industrial export director Philip Morris. "We've done work for Harrods, we've done projects in the Middle East, so we said no problem."

One thing the store won't have, though, is the name or the familiar yellow logo of the London emporium.

A spokesman for Harrods said, "We have no connection with (the project) whatsoever and no comment apart from that. We first heard about it Friday and there's been no approach to us. Obviously they can't use the name and logo, they're copyrighted."

Morris said the project would cost about $31.5 million "from the sand upward." Work should begin shortly, he said, with the opening tentatively set for late 1982 or early 1983.

The location has not been disclosed, at the request of the consortium, which reportedly includes members of the Saudi royal family.

Pakistani president kills vote

ISLAMABAD (AP) — President Zia ul-Haq today postponed the Pakistani general election indefinitely and banned all political activity in the country.

He also said all newspapers and magazines "poisoning and polluting" the current political atmosphere have been forbidden to publish.

The election had been set by Gen. Zia for Nov. 17.

$10M bond in bridge crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Local shipping agents for the Japanese-registered freighter which last week rammed the Second Narrows train bridge causing serious disruptions in port movements will have to post a $10 million bond to secure release of the ship.

Canadian National Railways, which owned the bridge, requested the bond Monday after consulting with the Federal Court of Canada.

A spokesman for Westward Shipping Ltd. said the bond matter "could be settled in a few days." The money must be posted before the Japan Erica, which is under long-term charter to Japan Lines, a major world shipping company, can sail again.

Meanwhile, Canron Western Bridge division has been awarded the contract by the CNR to repair the bridge, used to carry grain, sulphur, coal and other goods from main lines south of the harbor to elevators on the north shore.

Repair costs are estimated at $3 million and the job will take about 15 weeks.

Henry Kancs, business agent for the Grain Workers' Union, Local 333, said 50 to 150 union members at the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool facilities in North Vancouver will be laid off today as a result of the bridge damage.

"It's too bad we have to rely on one old bridge for the exporting trade in Western Canada," Kancs said. "There should be another route."

Barges, B.C. Railway and the Roberts Bank port all will be enlisted to fight the problem of moving potash, sulphur, coal and wheat shipments. The 10-year-old bridge normally handled 1,000 railway cars a day.

Officials estimated the accident will cut the harbor's capacity by at least 15 per cent.

Bob Peebles, Canadian area president of the International Longshoreman and Warehouseman's Union, said the bridge damage would mean problems for north shore grain handling facilities, but would not mean serious job reductions for his own union members.

Family fortune phoney

SURREY (CP) — A Surrey family became instant millionaires Sunday, but it didn't take long for the bubble to burst.

The family, whose names were withheld by RCMP, found an estimated $1 million in U.S. bills while taking an autumn stroll in the woods.

They learned from police soon after that the bills are counterfeit. The bills, of $10, $20 and $50 denominations, were well preserved. They had been buried in a five-gallon can in a South Surrey park.

"It's the biggest counterfeit recovery in the last two years," said a police spokesman. "The dealers must have lost their nerve."

Pair save a life

SQUAMISH (CP) — An off-duty RCMP officer and a 16-year-old Maple Ridge youth are credited with saving the life of one person after a plane crash that killed two others in Howe Sound Friday.

RCMP Constable R.W. Krenz and John Hiram picked up Paul Eriksen, 19, the backseat passenger thrown clear as the Cessna 172 plunged into the water shortly before 7 p.m.

Missing and presumed dead are pilot William Bingham, 54, of Squamish, and Carl John Sjohome, 30, of Quadra island.

Krenz and Hiram were setting crab traps about six metres from shore when the plane hit. The plane carrying the three men was flying to Squamish from Toba Inlet north of Powell River and couldn't find the airport because of fog.

Action before talk

Federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski is to be congratulated for the haste he is making in trying to get that broken railway bridge repaired in Vancouver. The first working day after the collision between the Japanese freighter and the Second Narrows Canadian National Railways span he called for tenders to have the estimated $1 million in damages repaired.

Wisely the minister is acting first before asking much needed questions in the assessment of blame and damages.

Officials of the Port of Vancouver suggest that the elimination of the main rail link to the north side of the harbor could mean the loss of 15 per cent of the west coast's port shipping potential. The exports of grain, coal, potash and sulphur are affected.

This is certainly an accident that Vancouver, and Canada as a whole can ill afford. The problems of transporting grain to port, labor unrest, and the ensuing backlog of waiting ships have left the west coast with an unsavory reputation in the world's shipping circles.

However, recent events had left much reason for optimism for increased stability and production of the west coast export trade. A three year contract has been signed with longshoremen and the federal government has assigned a national grain co-ordinator to attempt to iron out the bottlenecks in moving grain to Vancouver.

The collision must also prompt government action in other directions. It seems that tugboats and barges in the Fraser River and now freighters in the harbor are quite capable of wiping out bridges. Given the advanced state of navigational technology, a system should be devised to keep large marine traffic on course, fog or not.

Also, it is clear that with almost all Canada's west coast export capability laying in one basket, there is cause for the speedy development on an alternative. Although Prince Rupert will never rival Vancouver as a deep sea port, the potential is there to take the pressure off Vancouver.

Over the years Prince Rupert has borne the brunt of a lot more talk than action, and this latest accident in Vancouver adds much credence to the arguments for increased facilities in the northern port.

As a sidelight, it's interesting to note that no bridges span Prince Rupert harbor.

"... Harold has no confidence in gold or silver anymore ... he's getting ready for the time when we all go back to using wooden tokens ..."

Help is microscopic

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe told a news conference last week that the government is making some changes to the assessment rates for the 1980 taxation year.

The percentage of total value which will be deemed taxable will be reduced, he said, for property categorized as farmland, residential or resort land, and equipment and machinery.

The question of farmland is a special case because the government made specific provisions in the last budget to reduce property taxes on it. But it's worth looking at the actual steps the government is taking to ease the taxation burden on residential land as compared to that on "equipment and machinery" — a category that normally covers the fixed equipment of huge industries such as mines, factories, and mills.

The taxable rate on residential properties, Wolfe tells us, will drop from 15 per cent all the way down to 14.5 per cent. That means that the taxable value of a $100,000 house will be reduced from $15,000 to $14,500. In an area where the total tax rate is about 100 mills (as it is in Greater Victoria municipalities), the homeowners would experience an actual decrease in taxes of about $30 — if all other factors stayed equal.

That, as any taxpayer would agree, is better than a poke in the eye with a sharp stick, but look at the deal the industries get. Their taxable rate on equipment and machinery is being reduced from 30 per cent to 25 per cent. If they owned some equipment worth $60,000, their tax bill would be reduced by a full $300 — 10 times as much as the homeowner's.

The other problem the homeowner faces is that all other factors are not likely to stay equal. Taxable assessments are not a true way of reducing the tax burden. Changes like those the government has made don't mean that municipalities or school districts spend any less in total. It just means that the burden is spread around among various classes of property owners a bit differently.

So, if a municipality is going to lose revenue because of big decreases in the equipment and machinery category and on farmland, it will end up raising its mill rates to cover the difference. For 1980, in many municipalities, those increases will more than outweigh the small decrease given the homeowner through the government move.

The total amount of help given to the average taxpayer, it seems, will be microscopic.

Complexities of a new era

OTTAWA — A year ago, then Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, searching for a jurisdictional bone to toss to the provinces to shut them up and to get them to agree in return to patriate the constitution, found exactly what he was looking for.

Family law. The Fathers of Confederation had allotted it to Ottawa. But, what with divorces and maintenance orders, it had never brought with it any political joy.

So Trudeau offered it to the provinces. Naturally, they accepted. (As naturally, they didn't agree in return to patriate the constitution.)

Time passes. Enter Joe Clark. He's committed to a "new era" of decentralized federalism, to a view of Canada as "a community of communities", and to the belief that there's nothing wrong with "different governments doing different things in different parts of the country."

Second thoughts

To put into practice Clark's theory of "trust" no better way could be imagined than to complete the hand-over of family law, which even that centralist ogre Trudeau had agreed to. Right?

Wrong. Secretary of State David MacDonald is having second thoughts about the whole deal.

MacDonald's opinions matter. For one thing, he has a great deal of power, though he wears it as easily as he does his velvet evening suits. Culture; communications; status of women. Add to these, soon, the superportfolio of Minister of Social Development, at least on an acting basis until MacDonald decides whether he can handle the load.

For another thing, MacDonald in some ways is a clone of Clark. "In the cabinet, David's mind-set is the closest thing to Clark", says an insider who's close to both.

They aren't alike. Clark doesn't wear velvet suits; nor does he jog. But both see Canada as "a community of communities," because the view from Alberton, P.E.I., is no different from the view from High River, Alta. The two care a great deal about Parliament. They care as much, much more than the public yet recognizes, about the cause of women.

Women now are the problem. They're telling MacDonald not to hand over family law to the provinces.

In a letter to MacDonald, the Manitoba Coalition on Family Law (backed by the Joint Councils on the Status of Women and by the Canadian Bar Association), has urged Ottawa to hang on to family law.

DAVID MACDONALD
. . .torn on family law.

For two reasons. Provincial control, the Coalition argues, would give Canada ten divorce laws, and the same marital mess as in the U.S. Further, progress would be halted toward a national "no-fault" divorce system, as recommended in 1976 by the Canadian Law Reform Commission.

The arguments are persuasive — persuasive enough that MacDonald now is looking for a way to say "yes" to the women without saying "no" to the provinces.

MacDonald's dilemma illustrates the difficulties Clark has begun to encounter with his policy of "soft-core" federalism — hand-overs of Loto-Canada and of off-shore minerals; round the clock consultation; federal ministers calling at provincial capitals as often as encyclopedia salesmen (Clark has been to Calgary to see Premier Peter Lougheed; so far, Lougheed has found Ottawa too far to travel to.)

In theory, Canada as "a community of communities" sounds fine. In practice, Clark is discovering that the communities (provinces) often are at irreconcilable odds.

It goes without saying that energy will make or break the theory. So far, five months of earnest effort by Clark has left the community of Alberta and the community of Ontario as far apart as the start.

MacDonald is following the same learning curve.

Read the files

Cosier communications. In opposition MacDonald proposed to end a decade of federal-provincial jurisdiction by handing over cable-TV jurisdiction. He's now read the files. At next week's conference of communications' ministers in Toronto, MacDonald will propose joint jurisdiction, with Ottawa still holding the leash as a national watchdog.

Consider culture. In opposition, MacDonald proposed that the Canada Council hand over block funds to the provinces to hand on the artists. Since then, the artists have told MacDonald they like the council just the way it is — (because of its tradition of integrity; because artistic judgment often improves with distance). MacDonald now has decided to keep the council just the way it is.

MacDonald, and Clark also, are still believers. Carved on both their hearts are the words "cooperation; consultation", and, beneath these, "community of communities". But their heads are beginning to buzz. Both are beginning to learn that the difference between government and opposition isn't so much the difference between being in power and being out of it, but the difference between simplicity and complexity.

Store closing

Vancouver is to be congratulated on its efforts to have their stores closed one day a week and Victoria would do well to follow this example. This is suggested, not from a religious point of view, although I respect those holding such opinions, but purely for the effect on the economy.

Take food as an example. No matter whether stores are open six or seven days, the total combined sales for a week in a given area are going to be the same because public demand for such products is constant, depending only on need and the financial ability to take care of it. What changes are the stores' expenses, for obviously it costs more to be open seven days than six. More than one might think, too, for those working on Sunday usually are paid at a higher rate. Need I say who pays the extra?

What is unfair is for some shops to close and others to stay open on Sunday. That does give an advantage to the latter but the public continues to foot the bill for any increased cost. In fairness the hours should be the same for all, with the exception of those dispensing drugs and small establishments run by their owners without hired help. Sure it's convenient for businesses always to be open, but with the five-day work week, who needs more than six days for shopping? — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Endorse donation

Many people must be unaware of the desperate need of eye donation for corneal transplants, here in our own city. Renewed drivers' licences now carry a donor's consent form and in time this may alleviate the problem of the long waiting period when an operation must be performed. No shortage of corneas exists in Maryland, U.S.A. because there they are automatically removed from the deceased.

Eyesight is so precious, if you are under 50 years of age, won't you please endorse your driver's license today. Just attach your own written consent. — Mrs. C. E. Estlin, 3140 Service Street.

Record swap

I'm organizing what I believe will be the first ever Swap Meet exclusively for record collectors to be held on Vancouver Island, and I'm hoping the word will get out beyond the circle of active collectors.

The event will be held on Saturday, Nov. 10 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at View Royal Community Hall, 279 Island Highway.

I'd be pleased to hear from prospective sellers and anyone who wants further information or just wants to chat about records and collecting, at 592-5764. — Robert Turner, 20-2181 Haultain.

Failure to legislate

The article, "$50 gas fill up," in the Times, Oct. 2 is most realistic.

At present the general public is hell bent to consume more oil/gasoline, there is little evidence of conservation being practiced.

Our governments at all levels are failing to legislate or regulate toward a conserver society. Obviously, the pricing mechanism is a lever that may curb our excesses.

Meanwhile, new highways are being constructed, roads are being widened, purely to allow further automobile proliferation. These actions by the B.C. government, numerous municipalities (including Saanich) are far from being conservation oriented.

Last year, CASE submitted a brief to the National Energy Board with copies to some MPs and MLAs which included in part the following recommendations.

1) All levels of government be persuaded to impose severe restrictions on the building of highways, roads, widening of highways and roads, where such proposals are made to permit increased or smoother commuting automobile traffic flow and/or increased inter-city truck routes. In the latter case, this should be most pertinent where existing railway systems can be used for the transport of goods and people.

2) All government levels be required to clearly and publicly define their rationale for highway construction and widening. Implicit in such a defined rationale must be the construction energy content and the projected energy consumption which will result from use of the proposed facility. Furthermore, any alternative methods of transportation should be proposed.

In other words, highway construction and widening proposals should be subject to comprehensive environmental studies and consequent reports which include all the relevant energy parameters.

3) Senior levels of government be required to make funds available to provide extensive low energy cost public transport systems within urban and suburban areas and between urban areas (as in Regional Districts consisting of two or more municipalities and/or in organized territories where automobile use can be drastically curtailed).

4) Maximum use be made of existing railway systems for both passenger and freight conveyance, and that, where possible, extensions of existing systems and schedules be developed.

5) The private sector, particularly those companies employing hundreds, be encouraged to collaborate in, or develop, energy-saving transport schemes. In this context, the "Commute A Van Program" initiated by the 3M Company in St. Paul, Minnesota, is worthy of study because of the energy and economic savings beneficial to the company and its employees.

6) Every effort be made by all levels of government to re-define their urban and suburban planning toward village concepts whereby transportation energy expenditures can be minimized for the local residents relative to purchasing their domestic needs and obtaining normal community services.

We may not have time available to move smoothly into the Conserver Age, but we must try, thus minimizing the traumatic social and economic experiences now becoming visible.

Our present democratic freedom which permits us to greedily waste limited resources has to be curtailed by bold leadership, by legislation, by regulations. — Derrick Mallard, President, Citizens Association to Save the Environment.

Misdirected

I was very disappointed to read of the opposition of the Victoria's Old Town Association to the building of the Salvation Army's new detoxification and rehabilitation centre on lower Johnson Street on the grounds that the centre will attract undesirables to the area. Having previously worked for some years as a counsellor with the Salvation Army Harbour Light and having spent a good deal of my time in the downtown core, it has been my experience that it is not the Salvation Army that attracts problem people but the taverns, public houses, and the liquor store located in the area.

All one has to do is to walk down Yates Street to witness persons, many of them women, under the influence of alcohol hanging about these establishments; then one could reason that as this situation does not exist around the Harbour Light building that the attraction must be other than the Salvation Army.

If the Victoria's Old Time Association is so concerned, and they should be, about the image of the downtown core; they would be well advised to stop attacking the Army who are endeavoring to help problem people experience a more positive life style and monitor those liquor and beer outlets that encourage the abuse of alcohol leading to drunken and negative behaviour. They should work together with the Salvation Army to benefit not only the downtown core but also to the benefit of the entire city of Victoria. — William G. McCombe, 734 Lampson Street.

Have a look

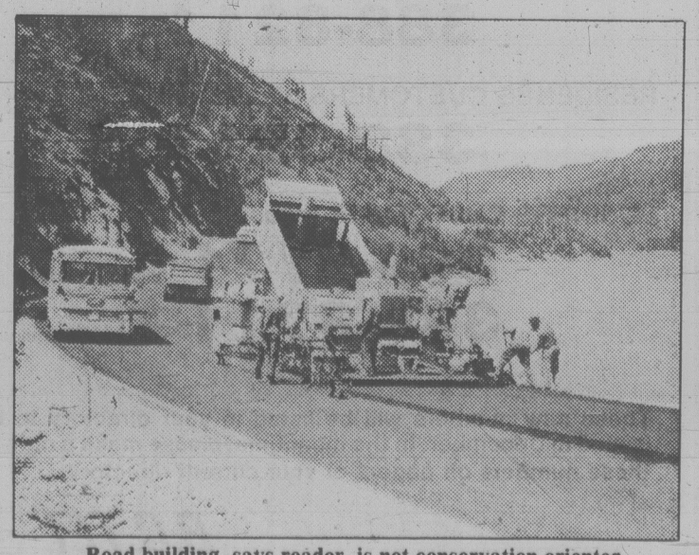
The hospital beds in this province are in short supply. What are hospital facilities used for? For every 100 births in B.C. 30 are aborted.

B.C. Medical is paying for these so-called therapeutic abortions, which in reality are nothing but "murder."

Many are performed by hysterectomy and are never recorded in births and deaths. Medical research is now done on the bodies and brains of these innocent ones. Some people have gone in the third time for an abortion, tying up facilities, nurses and doctors.

The highest compliment that can be paid to a person is to love them. Love is admiration, support, kindness and respect. The low moral actions of many people enhanced by drugs and liquor certainly is not love, or even like.

It is time we stood up and started looking, where our tax money is going, lest in years to come our grandchildren will say, what did you do to stop it? — Anne V. Sherbrook, 1919 Davie Street.



Road building, says reader, is not conservation oriented.

Women and Poverty: Some disturbing statistics

LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — Women's issues have always been divided into two very different categories.

Questions raised by financial statistics, whose import was self-evident, went into the serious category.

Last year's revelation that two out of three elderly widows are living in poverty, for example, generated great outpourings of outrage and concern. And so did the news that two of every five families headed by female single parents have incomes below the poverty line (compared to only one family in 12 headed by a male single parent).

Data showing that wages paid to women average only 60 per cent of what men are paid likewise struck a chord of widespread public disapprobation.

Lifestyle issues, on the other hand, have had a very different reception.

When feminists have complained about little girls being outfitted in frilly pink dresses, for instance, and about men not doing their fair share of the housework, the public's response has been characterized more by snickers than by indignation.

Women and Poverty, the newly-released report by the National Council of Welfare, contains an abundance of serious statistics, including a first-ever disaggregation of poverty totals into their male and female components. (Poor women turn out to outnumber poor men by 50 per cent).

But, far more importantly, the council study provides the long-missing link between the two categories of women's issues, demonstrating how it is that innocuous-seeming lifestyle questions are ultimately responsible for the shocking income figures.

"One-half of the population of this country is brought up on the assumption that it will always be taken care of by the other half", says the report. And, indeed, the data shows that only one married woman in 10 finds herself in poverty.

But only 28 per cent of married women stay married for the rest of their lives. Sixteen per cent separate or divorce, while 56 per cent outlive their husbands and wind up as widows.

Because they have not been trained to fend for themselves, the study notes, "most of the wives whose marriages have ended will see the rest of their lives unfold in poverty".

Saving women from poverty, says the council, means preparing them to cope on their own — a process which begins in infancy. A little girl who is taught to be passive and defer to active little boys, it observes, is not being readied to make her own way in life.

The council divides its recommendations into two groups: those directed at the current poverty of so many Canadian women and their families, and those aimed at ending the vicious circle by which the inevitability of that poverty is perpetuated.

In the former category, its proposals include the replacement of various tax deductions for dependants with increases in the refundable child tax credit and Guaranteed Income Supplement for the Aged, expansion of the Spouse's Allowance to include all low-income people over the age of 60, and a boost in welfare rates to at least poverty-line levels.

In the latter category, the council acknowledges that the most important changes are solely in the hands of parents, and that no act of government can cause them to provide similar upbringings for daughters as for sons. Nonetheless, says the report, there are a good many things that governments can do.

In the schools, governments can ensure an end to sex stereotyping in textbooks, course contents, teacher and guidance counsellor attitudes, and so on.

In its regulation of the broadcast media, government can take action to eliminate sexual stereotypes in radio and television programing.

In their labor laws, governments can require that employers provide equal pay for work of equal value, and they can insist on the introduction of affirmative action programs to put an end to job ghettos (low-paid occupations populated almost entirely by women, while higher-income ones are occupied almost entirely by men).

Other recommendations for government action in this long-term category extended from the Canada Pension Plan to the enforcement of court-ordered support payments.

Although the preparation of Women and Poverty began in the days of the previous government, the timing of its completion seems particularly appropriate.

Improving the social and economic position of women is a goal to which the Clark ministry has been claiming a special commitment — for reasons which no doubt range from the prime minister's feminist wife to the suffragette mother of the minister responsible for the status of women, Secretary of State David MacDonald.

In the light of those protestations, it will be an interesting test to see what comes of the welfare council's recommendations.

Indians close to agreement on land claims

By ROBERT WILLIAMSON
The Globe and Mail

VANCOUVER — When Prime Minister Joe Clark came to Vancouver recently to bury the hatchet with Victoria and announce a planned transfer of control over offshore resources to the province, he was careful to toss in a caveat about Indian interests.

"We have an obligation to ensure that the rights of Indian people are protected in any negotiations where those rights may be legitimate."

The dutiful acknowledgement from Ottawa, the lone governmental advocate on such matters for the past six years, barely placated the Indians and probably peeved Victoria.

Successive B.C. governments have held to a maddeningly simple premise: Indians have no justifiable land claims today.

It's understandable, if not excusable. It has been estimated that the land and resource claims could bankrupt Canada's storied lotus land.

The "European invasion" is still the historical reference point for grievances. When riled, Indians occasionally assert sweeping claims to all the land and all its resources. In fact, the demands are somewhat more modest — if just as unpalatable to Victoria.

Despite the province's hostility, however, sources say the two senior governments and Indian leaders are close to settling the return of lands, and cash payments, for chunks of 22 reserves taken from the Indians 60 years ago.

In the meantime, the buzzword among many Indian leaders today is self-reliance.

"If we're going to practise self-determination we have to start practising self-reliance," says George Manuel, president of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs — biggest and best organized of the groups.

Six years go the Supreme Court fight by B.C.'s Nishga Indians for more than 5,000 square miles of the northwest coast was instrumental in reversing Ottawa's hard line on land claims. And now Indian eyes across Canada are watching B.C. again as the rival Indian organizations, in an unprecedented show of unity, press claims for new levels of economic and social independence.

Ottawa is quarterbacking this latest drive, confirming the suspicions, of, well, rednecks, that it is something between a conspirator and saboteur.

Rail line barricade in the Kootenays

Indian representatives meet next month to map strategy. Draft guidelines call for the allocation of the entire Indian Affairs economic development budget directly to all bands on a per capita basis. Indians want full control over public funds, virtually eliminating federal bureaucratic powers of control and supervision.

The implications are breathtaking. Total federal aid to B.C. Indians now is well over $100-million a year.

"It's taken the DIA 100 years to create the dependency attitude and we have to break that down very slowly," said Robert Manuel, a band chief and head of the UBCIC's Indian government portfolio.

"But we're going to make it, come hell or high water."

The strengthening of Indian government, or band councils, is the central theme of the UBCIC's 11th general assembly this week.

There will be a big push there, too, for ratification of a long-awaited statement on aboriginal rights. Cultural uplifting is all very well, but land and power are the key words.

The Indians want reserves expanded to the point where they can support farming and forestry businesses. The province has some of the wealthiest bands in the country, notably those with Vancouver reserves worth tens of millions of dollars. Others have reserves smaller than one adjoining farm.

And there would be unrestricted hunting and fishing rights as part of a dramatic consolidation of power of Indian governments.

"We never talked about absolute independence. We're talking about a degree of sovereignty," said Robert Manuel. (Indians are still trying to assess Jake Epp's commitment and cabinet clout.)

The land claims struggle has been at the standstill for a year as Indians pop in and out of courts in the fight over the native food fishery. Salmon, the Indians' staple for thousands of years, now has to be shared with white sports fishermen — with whom relations could not be blacker — and commercial fishermen.

The Indians' position is that they are not bound by open and closed seasons, which are supposed to conserve the runs. Even Ottawa, trying to fit its new role as partner rather than paternal keeper, is being backed into a corner on this sensitive aspect of aboriginal rights as alarms are being sounded about the survival of the salmon.

Despite all the talk, change is more illusion than reality. The union of chiefs is a wiser body today than was the frustrated assembly of four years ago that voted to abruptly reject all government aid in a stroke of ill-conceived self-reliance. Refusing even welfare, some bands stuck it out until mid-winter. Later, many of the chiefs were voted out of office before the motion was meekly rescinded.

"There was a point in the history of B.C. when Indians used to outnumber non-Indian settlers," sighs George Manuel.

"We read in documents in the archives they worried that if they antagonized the Indians there could be a war and they would lose. If only my forefathers had known that then. It's too late — you guys outnumber us now."

The sun's 'clock'

THE ECONOMIST

Was the recent series of upsets in the weather, such as the 1979 drought, the nasty part of a 22-year climatic cycle driven by the sun? Professor Robert Dicke of Princeton University has revived interest in such a cycle with a new attempt to explain the apparent correlation between earth's climate and a 22-year phase in the sun's activity.

Superficially, the cycle is associated with sun spots, dark spots appearing on the sun's surface. But it is hard to envisage how these alone can affect the earth's climate. One attraction of Professor Dicke's new theory is that he regards them as a surface reflection of deeper, more important changes in the sun's magnetic field, which he attributes to a kind of clock inside the sun.

There have long been scattered but inconclusive indications of a 22-year cycle at work on earth (e.g., in temperature and rainfall records). Now there are two more persuasive pieces of evidence, which are helping to make scientists take the cycle more seriously.

● Isotope ratios. The relative abundance of deuterium and hudrogen absorbed from water by plants as they grow depends on temperature. Measurements of the deuterium/hydrogen isotope ratio in bristlecone pine trees, spanning 1,000 years of history, show a clear 22-year cycle.

● Tree rings. The annual rings laid down in trees also reflect changes in the weather. Forty years of painstaking work at the University of Arizona, on wood samples yielding a continuous record back to 1700, show a strong correlation between periods of extensive drought in the United States and the 22-year solar cycle.

These correlations do not look like mere statistical flukes. But what is the causal link? It may be to do with the fact that the sun's fluid surface rotates much faster at the equator than at the poles. This twists the sun's magnetic field, gradually amplifying its strength until the stresses created are released in a crescendo of sun spots, solar flares and the like.

At this point, the field dies away and reverses polarity. The whole process is then repeated, the field finally returning to its original polarity after 22 years.

The sunspots that punctuate this cycle are themselves only one manifestation of solar activity — and a rather erratic one at that. They have captured so much attention simply because they are highly visible makers of the sun's activity.

Professor Dicke focuses on the basis magnetic cycle. This, he argues, is very finely tuned. Indeed, the clock deep within the sun may be something called a magneto-fluid oscillator (a crude analogy would be with a shaking bowl of jelly), which modulates the 22-year cycle. And he postulates that this oscillation also provides the link to earth's weather, modulating a change in the sun's power output (its luminosity) over the cycle.

Some of the features of his model are very neat. It explains facts like the distorted core of the sun, the switches in polarity of the sun's magnetic field and a long lag time (about 13 years) between the time of a magnetic disturbance deep within the sun and the appearance of a sun spot on the surface.

But Professor Dicke's model is vague on precisely how changes in the sun's magnetic field affect the sun's luminosity. But he has already set other scientists thinking. The deeper significance of sun spots has not been probed seriously enough.

A farewell to loins

Russell Baker

Out of the attic where she had been rummaging among my secret treasures came a dear, sweet child with a novel published 30 years ago and tucked away almost ever since for clandestine reading on a dim night in February.

"What are loins?" she asked.

"Give me that book," I said.

She didn't. "Somebody has underlined this sentence," she said, reading: "'In her loins she felt the ancient hunger stirring.'"

The innocent curiosity on her face left no doubt that the sentence meant absolutely nothing to her; that she, in fact, had not an inkling of what loins were. Oh, she was old enough, all right, to know that a loin was something we might have in the deep freeze, but why a heroine should sense ancient hunger stirring in her grocery cache was beyond her comprehension.

This child, though beneficiary of progressive sex education in the public school system and voracious consumer of modern anatomical potboilers and R-rated films, was utterly ignorant of loins.

Well, I am nothing if not enlightened in my willingness to tell children all. I laughed a very superior laugh. "Never heard of loins, eh?" (Very superior laughter.) "What do they teach you at the movies these days, anyhow?"

I savored this rare opportunity to have the drop on the Pepsi generation, then relented and said, "Loins are . . ."

At that instant I became aware that I didn't know what loins are, that I had never known what loins were. Loins were — well, loins!

It was like trying to tell somebody what ham hocks are. People who know what ham hocks are have a hard time telling people who don't. They take ham hocks for granted, have never tried to explain ham hocks. If somebody asks, "What are ham hocks?" they can only answer, "Ham hocks? Well — they're ham hocks, for God's sake!"

Loins, let me quickly add for the benefit of youngsters in the audience, have nothing to do with ham hocks. Nowadays, I gather, loins don't even exist anymore, but at one time they were absolutely indispensable anatomy to all authors of books intended to steam the eyeglasses, as well as books dealing with men of heroic iron.

The latter were forever girding their loins. In fact, that was all they did to their loins so far as I could determine. What was the first thing they thought of when confronted with the necessity to whomp the tar out of some offending rascal? Their loins. And what did they do to their loins? They girded them.

I was never able to envision a girding. I assumed it involved wrapping something tightly, as in a girdle, but I rejected the image of Achilles and Hector lacing girdles around their loins, not only because it seemed effeminate but also because I couldn't imagine precisely where their loins were located.

That was a nice quality about loins. You never knew exactly what they were. The literary evidence suggested they were located somewhere in the middle third of the torso, but whether they were interior or exterior and precisely what they looked like were mysteries.

The mystery was deepened by their obvious versatility. On one hand, loins could be girded; on the other, they were also subject to curious internal sensations. This was particularly so in the case of women whose loins were capable of feeling ancient hunger stirring, irresistible yearning and similar appetites of a distinctly lubricious character.

Modern novelists seem to have abandoned loins. I am now on page 223 of a fairly typical anatomical potboiler of the sort that sells 750,000 copies in hard cover alone and have yet to encounter loins anywhere.

Every chapter canvasses both male and female carcasses with a thoroughness that would awe a surgeon, but in all that endless description of the human parts there is not a single mention of the loins. Nor do I encounter loins in any of the dozens of similar contraptions which I read strictly to stay abreast of trends in modern literature, you understand.

I take this to reflect a slavish obedience to modern literature's dictum that novelists always call a liver a liver, a kidney a kidney, a pancreas a pancreas, and so on. I also assume that these writers, with their staggering knowledge of the human corpus, would call loins loins if there were any loins to be described. That they never do so persuades me that loins no longer exist.

Very well. I do not resist the march of knowledge. I concede that the heroine about whom the child asked me felt ancient hunger stirring in her ileum, her esophagus, her capillaries perhaps, though it makes her less interesting, since I am not her physician. But what can strong men gird if not their loins? Their hips, I suppose. "Fierce Achilles girded his hips." Forget it, Homer.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in light trading on the Canadian bond market Monday, reflecting a technical correction to last week's sharp declines.

The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues rose one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues were up one-eighth.

Day-to-day money was available at 13½ per cent.

The market was aided by continued strength in the U.S. dollar, analysts at Wood Gundy said. Trading activity remained extremely light with most participants waiting to see whether the Canadian Government decides to announce a new cash issue in November.

Dealers said the decisions by Gulf Canada to indefinitely postpone a scheduled debenture offering is perhaps the first sign that corporate treasurers are baulking at paying present high interest rates.

READER'S DIGEST: If this is criticism of the literary efforts on an information sign about beavers at a pond in Vancouver's Stanley Park Zoo, it's hardly subtle. It's biting, though, and gave this beaver — and onlookers — something to chew on.

Crystal business doubles

A renovated Crystal Pool is drawing twice as much business these days compared with the pre-renovation period, Ald. Robin Blencoe said Monday.

Revenue for the 12 months ended Aug. 31 was $279,353 compared with $135,958 two years ago for the same period. He said 1978 can't be used for comparison purposes because the pool was closed four months.

The city still subsidizes the Crystal, however. It budgeted $473,113 for 1979 to run the pool, including the capital costs of two saunas, whirlpool bath and exercise room.

Strain should ease

Since the Victoria detention home was closed in June for renovations the only holding facility for juvenile offenders on southern Vancouver Island has been an old farm house in Metchosin.

The house, situated on 42 acres near William Head, is sorely lacking in security measures to prevent inmates from escaping.

There are no bars and the fence around the house is only three feet high.

Two to three staff members are on duty around the clock to look after the inmates whose number has varied from as low as six to as high as 12.

Not surprisingly, 10 inmates have gone AWOL since June, half of them on one night.

But juvenile detention home director Del Phillips says he's surprised there have been so few problems.

The majority of juveniles have co-operated with the temporary set-up, he says.

But there have been problems. One night two inmates went on a window-breaking rampage. There have been occasional incidents of drug use and drinking and of young friends of inmates slipping in for unauthorized visits.

There also have been problems in handling high-risk cases. Some juveniles have had to be held in adult police cells pending their appearance in family court.

That requires the consent of the family court judge first, however, and can be done only if the juvenile is 14 or over.

Otherwise the high-risk offender must be shipped over to Willingdon in Burnaby.

Willingdon has been bearly able to meet the demand. Built to accommodate 55, it is handling more than 80 at times.

Officials hope the overload will ease when JDH renovations are completed and Metchosin will return to its former use as centre of Outward Bound programs for young offenders.

United Way mailers out

If you didn't get a United Way appeal mailer in the mail Monday, it will arrive today or Wednesday.

Some 99,000 mailers have been sent to Greater Victoria households.

Appeal organizers are asking apartment caretaker-managers to ensure the mailers are distributed to all tenants.

Designed to replace door-to-door canvassing, the mailers will be the only contact for those not canvassed at work.

All that's needed is a donation and a stamp for each pre-addressed envelope, or the donation can be turned into special booths that will be manned from Saturday, Oct. 20, to Saturday, Oct. 27.

The booths will be at: Town Square, Sidney; The Bay's Fisgard Street entrance; the Broad Street entrance to Eaton's home furnishings building; Hillside shopping centre; Mayfair shopping centre; University Heights shopping centre.

Pressure is on for children's hospital

The capital region needs a true children's hospital to draw together children's medical services now scattered around the Victoria area.

Spokesmen for the G. R. Pearkes Clinic and Queen Alexandra children's hospital said Monday a child health centre should be built adjacent to the two facilities on Arbutus Road which could draw on the academics in nursing, social work and psychology at the nearby University of Victoria.

And Queen Alexandra board chairman Mike Field said they also support the establishment of a true children's hospital probably on the grounds of Royal Jubilee Hospital to provide specialized acute care service for children.

The suggestions came as he and Pearkes clinic chairman Joe Bourque announced at a press conference that the two have refused to take part in the Capital Regional District's child health care study.

Instead, Pearkes and the Queen Alexandra are paying $20,000 for their own independent study because the CRD refuses to re-examine a two-year-old decision to put pediatric and obstetric services out at the new Helmcken Road hospital.

Dr. Basil Boulton, medical director at the Queen Alexandra, said this decision only further fragments child health care services in the capital region.

It means that special services for mothers and newborn babies will be at Helmcken Road while neurosurgical, radiological and other services which may be needed will be across town at the RJH.

Extended care for children is to be concentrated at the Alexandra and Pearkes clinic.

Boulton said the expert advice of pediatricians and other specialists has consistently been ignored by those who make hospital planning decisions.

In 1977, Victoria-area pediatricians urged that all special services for mothers and newborns be combined at the Jubilee, but were overruled by the regional hospital and health planning commission.

He said that if the commission rules out any re-examination of allocation of services, it immediately restricts the scope of its child health care study.

The Alexandra and Pearkes clinic are also upset at their exclusion from any direct involvement in the study.

The region itself would do the study, but staff at the two children's facilities want it conducted by outside consultants free from political pressure.

Boulton added that their study will probably confirm that a specialized non-acute health care centre for children comprising the Alexandra and Pearkes clinic plus an acute care children's hospital operated in conjunction with the Jubilee is the route to go.

But if it doesn't, the two will abide by its recommendations.

Times cartoon case appeal starts Monday

An appeal by the Times against a B.C. Supreme Court decision in a libel suit brought by former Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm will open next Monday.

Two days have been set aside for the appeal, which will be heard by the five-member B.C. Court of Appeal headed by Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz.

Supreme Court judge, Mr. Justice Craig Munro, awarded Vander Zalm $3,500 after finding a cartoon drawn by Times' cartoonist Bob Bierman libelled Vander Zalm.

The cartoon depicted a person picking the wings off flies. The person had a tag pinned to his lapel which read Minister of Human Resources. The cartoon ran without caption.

Neighbors help make a miracle for Colleen

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — If you really want to know the true meaning of friends and neighbors, ask Helen and George Tingle.

It's been almost a year to the day since their 15-year-old daughter, Colleen, was smashed up in a car accident that left her paralyzed from the neck down.

Since the accident, Colleen has been in a Vancouver hospital, undergoing operations, learning how to operate her wheelchair and adjusting to life with a terrible handicap.

When she returned home last week, she found a new extension had been added to the family home. The addition contains a bedroom, bathroom and living room for Colleen, all necessary because her wheelchair won't fit through some of the doors in the old sections of the home.

Best of all, the addition was built with the help of the Tingles' friends and neighbors.

The friends and neighbors didn't stop there, however. They organized a hall party attended by 400 people to welcome Colleen home. The party raised a total of $3,500.

"We could have sold at least another 100 tickets, but we didn't want to crowd the hall," said Diane Andrews, one of the party organizers.

The Tingles run a service station on a highway leading south of Prince George.

"Every time I looked at her face it was like a miracle," Helen Tingle said after the party.

Now that the excitement of the homecoming is over, the Tingles plan to begin working out a routine for Colleen. They hope that with various aids and a daily program she might be able to continue with her grade 11 school work.

Fairness urged in selecting electoral officer

NDP house leader Frank Howard is concerned about the pending appointment of a new chief electoral officer in B.C.

Howard said Monday he wants assurance that the new man is not a political appointment and the MLA for Skeena sent a letter to cabinet calling for a structural change to ensure fairness in the selection of the new electoral officer.

The appointment should not be left to the government of the day, said Howard, because it can lead to a friend-of-the-party approach.

He suggested an all-party committee be established to make the appointment or a standing committee of the legislature with the requirement of unanimous consent.

Howard said the standing committee could also conduct regular reviews of the provincial Elections Act to keep it up to date.

Ken Morton, B.C.'s chief electoral officer for many years, retired following the May 10 provincial general election.

Ghetto fear halts rezoning move

Saanich council Monday rejected a plan to rezone for housing 25 acres of rural land after it was told the move would turn the neighborhood into a ghetto.

A large number of people in the crowded gallery argued against rezoning the Wilkinson, Santa Maria, Santa Rosa, Altamont, Hastings area.

They said creation of 6,000 square-foot lots would destroy the rural qualities that attracted most people in the first place and turn the area into a congested area overrun with people, pets and traffic.

Residents opposed to the rezoning included eight of 15 property owners listed on the rezoning application.

But those who supported the rezoning said it is impossible to prevent growth because the area is surrounded by residential development.

Former Saanich alderman Ian Cass, now an official of the Victoria branch of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said statistics show rental accommodation and new house sales in Greater Victoria are low and new construction has declined sharply.

Some of the property proposed for rezoning has recently been included in the sewer service area.

Ald. Sandy Noel said he assumed when sewers are added development is close behind.

But Ald. John Mika said the municipal staff shouldn't have proposed rezoning on the basis of available sewer services.

"I've been told on numerous occasions we don't plan by sewers. This application seems to be a classic case of such planning," he said.

Plight of blind revealed

A slide presentation on the plight of blind people in under-privileged countries will be shown at First Baptist Church, 875 North Park, at 8 tonight.

Art Jenkys, president of Operation Eyesight's Christmas fund-raising campaign for Vancouver Island, also will speak at the public meeting on the work of the organization to restore the sight of children.

It is estimated that more than 100,000 children under the age of 5 go blind every year because of vitamin A deficiency.

Donations to Operation Eyesight's Christmas Fund should be sent to P.O. Box 565, Victoria, V8W 2P3.

First strike possible

A count of 936 strike ballot votes today will determine if the 1,005-member B.C. Government Professional Employees Association will launch the first strike in its six years of existence.

A strike could shut down virtually all provincial government operations.

The PEA executive recommended strike action after talks broke down last month.

PEA executive director Geoff Holter refused to speculate on the outcome, but it is anticipated that some form of action will be taken by the association.

It represents the government's professional employees, ranging from junior professionals to senior administrators.

Holter said the association has indicated its willingness to go to arbitration but said the government has ignored its overtures.

Negotiations for a new contract had been under way for a year before they broke down.

The old contract expired at the end of last year.

Holter said that while strike action could shut down virtually every government department, such action might not conform to the ethical standards of the association's membership.

The result of the strike balloting is to be revealed at a press conference scheduled for Wednesday.

Minnie Mt. bill won't go to residents

Saanich council decided Monday it won't make Cadboro Bay Residents Association pay court costs connected with the Minnie Mountain housing development controversy.

Council unanimously decided to drop the matter because aldermen felt Cadboro Bay residents had the right to oppose the bylaw and have already spent a substantial amount of money.

The B.C. Court of Appeal last week overturned a B.C. Supreme Court decision which had quashed the land-use bylaw between Saanich and Broadmead Farms Ltd., for a 70-acre mixed housing development at Ten Mile Point.

The court case was initiated by the CBRA on a technical point of conflict of interest by Ald. David Paterson.

In a 32-page judgment the appeal court upheld the conflict-of-interest charge, but said it wasn't enough to quash the bylaw.

On Monday Paterson denied any conflict of interest, saying the court is referring to something that doesn't exist.

Paterson, who voted in favor of the land use bylaw, is office manager for Pearlman and Lindholm, Saanich's legal firm at that time.

He said he is simply an employee of the firm and not connected in any way with its legal dealings.

Instructed by his lawyer to remain silent, Paterson said his choice not to speak has been interpreted as guilt by the courts.

Saanich's lawyer during the proceedings, Rodney Taylor, said the court found Paterson had an indirect interest of "a disqualifying nature" in the contract for legal services between the municipality and the law firm.

Taylor said he doubts the residents' association will launch an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

CBRA president Dick Boss said last week the association hasn't decided further action, but will probably start a new court case using another technicality.

Oil disaster 'now sure'

Trans Mountain's plan will see tankers shipping oil from Valdez, Alaska, to Low Point, on the west coast of Washington.

However, it's up to the U.S. government to decide which project will be approved, he said.

The Canadian government will talk to Washington and try to obtain the route with the least environmental impact, Fraser said.

The prime minister will announce in the near future how Canada plans to get the U.S. to modify its thinking, he indicated.

David Anderson, an ex-MP and former leader of the B.C. Liberal party, a long-time opponent of tanker traffic off the west coast, was quoted as saying he was sure President Carter would accept the Northern Tier proposal.

Anderson said Ottawa and B.C. must now lobby hard for location of oilport facilities at Low Point, rather than Port Angeles, and for U.S. legislation compelling the four major oil companies to tie into the port by pipeline, thus lessening the likelihood of environmental damage.

B.C. Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said he today that, as it appeared the all-land route was being scrapped, he now favors the Trans Mountain proposal.

Three-train pileup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — At least 350 persons were reported injured today in a chain-reaction crash of commuter trains that sent riders tumbling down the aisles. There was no word on fatalities.

"All hell broke loose," said a passenger aboard one train which slammed into a parked train and shoved it into a third train on the Media-West Chester Line.

Most of the injuries appeared to involve cuts, bruises and broken bones.

"We ran into the two-car express from West Chester which had stopped for a train in front," an engineer for Conrail, which operates the commuter service said.

Mother and son killed when hit by truck

Sidney RCMP today identified the victims of a fatal traffic accident in the 700-block Birch Road in North Saanich Monday as a mother and her young son.

Dead are Mrs. Carolyn Lee Stansal, 31, and her 17-month-old son, Benjamin of 720 Birch.

Police said the two were walking beside the road about noon when they were struck by a one-ton, flatbed truck driven by William Ellis, 38, address not known.

Ellis was taken to Saanich Peninsula Hospital where he is listed in good condition today recovering from chest injuries.

An inquest is expected to be held but no date has been set as yet.

Meanwhile, a 22-year-old man was killed Monday night when his car plowed off the road on a curve near Comox.

RCMP said Daniel Lebel was killed instantly. An unidentified passenger was treated in hospital for minor injuries.

He has 'this thing' about solar self-sufficiency so he went to work

$250,000 house. . . and no furnace

By AB KENT

Claude Butler is building a $250,000 house with all the features of luxury seaside living — except a furnace.

Instead, the cedar and glass villa overlooking Brentwood Bay will be heated in fall or winter, rain or shine, by a huge tank of water in which sunshine is trapped on all but the dullest days of the year.

It is Western Canada's first all-solar house and its performance is being monitored for its potential by the National Research Council.

Few home-builders are as dedicated to the solar energy concept or have the financial resources of Butler, a successful business and industrial figure here for more than 25 years.

The solar component of his new house at 7074 Brentwood is worth about $60,000, a lot of capital investment to pay off in what he will save in furnace oil bills. It could take 100 years at current oil prices to repay the cost.

But Butler doesn't care about that. He wants his home to be independent of fuel or electric heating and took satisfaction in researching and designing a total solar system.

"Claude likes to design and work things out. He's really studied this solar thing," says contractor Steve Butler, his second cousin.

The only concession to sunless periods in the new house are three large circulating fireplaces which dominate much of the interior design. One of these incorporates domestic hot water heating.

In the event of a long cold spell with little solar radiation, Claude and his wife Jean, the mayor of Central Saanich, can close off this part of the house and maintain comfortable temperature without relying on the solar-heated water system.

Butler hardly expects to find that necessary.

"I've been back through the weather charts to about 1912. I find it's very seldom we get more than two weeks of weather when there's no sun."

Victoria gets strong sunshine about 300 days a year and the copper collectors designed and built by Eric Hoffman, of Solar Systems Ltd., are capable of collecting 40 per cent of the BTUs radiated on to Butler's rooftop.

Interior design of the house, by Vancouver architect Tom Annandale, the man who designed the Institute of Ocean Sciences, incorporates a soaring ceiling and plenty of seaward-looking glass that suggests rather high heating demands.

But all the windows are double-glazed and all exterior walls are built on 2x6 studs to permit R-20 glass fibre insulation. The rafters are 28-foot select 2x12 fir with R-40 insulation, supporting a boomerang-shaped roof.

Heat collectors, each weighing 400 pounds, are arrayed in two sections and provide 1,400 square feet of glazed and insulated collection area.

The heart of the system is a 14-foot deep, 48-foot long reinforced concrete water tank that holds 92,000 gallons at a potential 180 degree fahrenheit temperature.

Besides containing hot water, one end of the enclosed tank supports the main living-room fireplace and its 32-foot chimney, a total weight of 11½ tons of brick.

Because it forms part of the foundation, the tank was the first part of the house finished. In August it was connected to the solar panels and filled with 88,000 gallons of cold water which by the end of September had risen to 87 degrees.

At that rate no difficulty is anticipated in heating stored water to 180 degrees by the end of a full summer.

Electric pumps circulate the water between roof, tank and heat exchangers which are similar to large automotive radiators shrouded with a conventional furnace-type electric fan. This is connected by conventional hot-air ducts to various outlets in the 3,500-square foot dwelling.

The ducts are about twice as large as normal because the fan will operate continuously and at a slower speed than required by the usual on-off cycling of a hot air furnace.

The water-warmed air is constantly in slow motion and need not be raised to the high peak temperature required by a typical oil-fired cycling furnace which continually reheats air that has cooled.

Butler's house will be maintained constantly at any temperature he selects because the heat exchangers use water at a constant temperature and are bypassed automatically by water at excess temperature.

And with air always in slow-motion, there will be no drafty surges of warm or cool air common to conventionally-heated homes.

In addition, there is a heat exchanger in the storage tank to supply the domestic tank with all the hot water the couple expects to need for kitchen, bathrooms and laundry.

Even after they move into the finished house within a few weeks, Butler will be planning and designing more solar self-sufficiency.

He believes there is great opportunity for photovoltaic cells that generate electricity from sunshine.

"There's still room on my roof for that. We've got to keep working on this energy thing — the price of oil isn't going to stay where it is."

The Coroner's Act is sexist, but it won't be that way for long if Chief Coroner Dr. William McArthur has his way.

In an address to the B.C. Safety Council in Vancouver last week, McArthur noted a section of the act reads that: "Where an inquest is held, it shall inquire into and determine who the deceased was and how, when, where and by what means he died."

McArthur said the statement contains a probably unintentional but nevertheless unacceptable inference that only male deaths will be investigated.

He assured his audience he will recommend Attorney-General Garde Gardom have the sexist connotation amended at the next session of the legislature.

Franklin in port for prop repairs

The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Franklin is back in Esquimalt for repairs to propeller damage caused by Arctic ice.

The ship left Esquimalt July 12 and spent the season replacing the icebreaker Camsell, out of commission for repairs, on western Arctic supply runs.

The 13,000-horsepower Franklin, built for $50 million in the North Vancouver Burrard-Yarrows Corporation shipyard, damaged her port propeller in Viscount Melville Sound Sept. 25.

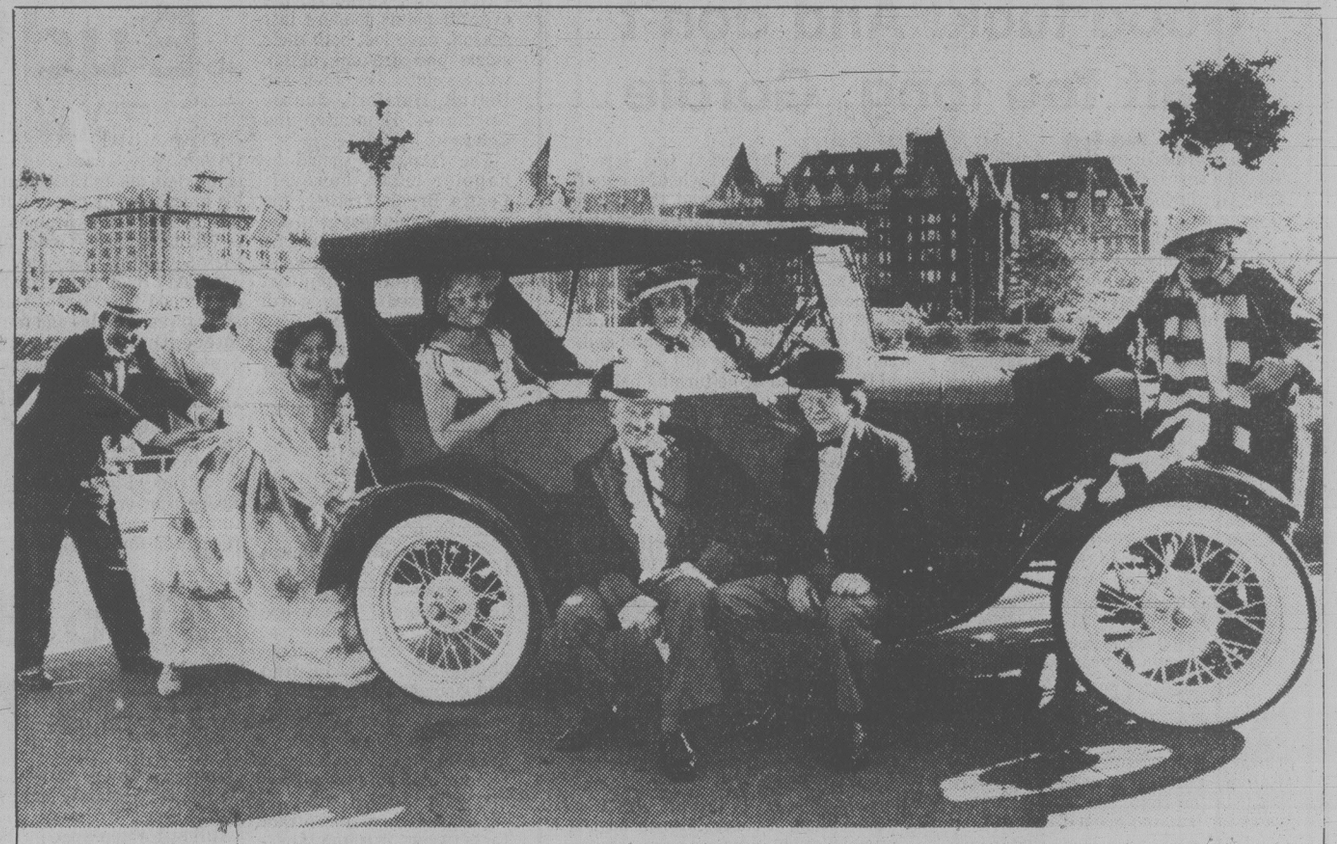
The 23,000-horsepower Louis St. Laurent, Canada's most powerful icebreaker, escorted the Franklin out of the ice.

A new propeller will be installed and the shaft checked to see if it needs repairs or replacement. The starboard prop also will be checked.

The Franklin will leave for St. John's, via the Panama Canal, later in November.

The St. Laurent, which received some hull damage, will arrive in Vancouver later this week to take on fuel and provisions.

She will also travel via the Panama Canal to her home port of Dartmouth where repairs will be carried out on her hull.



Topper touts set to lift the lid

Thirty Victoria tourism and civic leaders will launch a three-day blitz on Vancouver on Thursday, offering tea and crumpets as they trumpet Victoria's virtues.

One of the group's main targets will be Greater Vancouver shopping centres. Victoria's acting mayor Bill Tindall and other chamber members will appear on radio and television shows.

The City of Victoria Pipe Band — recently rated the sixth best in the world — will perform Saturday in Robson Square from 11 to 11:30 a.m. and 2 to 2:45 p.m.

Vancouver citizens also will be showered with colorful seedpack postcards.

Following the custom instituted by the chamber and the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts, three hatting ceremonies will be performed. Among those to be honored will be Mayor Jack Volrich.

Museum hails carving gift

A campaign to buy back B.C.'s native Indian art has taken an unexpected but welcome twist — someone has donated more than 100 pieces of 19th-century Haida carving.

As part of its $500,000 buy-back campaign, the Provincial Museum picked up similar pieces, carved from argillite, an extremely hard black volcanic rock found in the Queen Charlotte Islands where the Haidas lived.

Those purchases apparently inspired the donation, Peter McNair, ethnology curator at the museum, said Monday.

Neither he nor any other museum officials would provide information on the value of the gift or the identity of who gave it.

However, the proprietor of a Vancouver antique shop which handles Indian art, giving what he called a conservative estimate, said the carvings would be worth at least $1,000 each and "could be worth a lot more depending on the carver."

McNair said the carvings now are at the museum, but an announcement of the acquisition is not expected until next spring. The announcement is being withheld because of a request from the donor, said another museum official.

The donation was a big boost for the provincial museum's campaign to buy back B.C. Indian art, much of which was stolen, confiscated or sold for a pittance earlier this century.

Using $500,000 of lottery funds earmarked for the campaign about 2½ years ago, the museum acquired hundreds of pieces through auction houses and agents in New York and London, and from private collectors.

The museum's purchases included a Tsimishian mask from the 1870s, several Nootka masks and a host of other artifacts, including about 40 argillite carvings.

"It's because of our collecting and interest that we got those (100) pieces," said McNair.

Some of the museum's latest acquisitions will also find their way back to the ancestors of the people who originally owned them, though not permanently. They will be loaned on a long-term basis, said McNair.

"For example, there's a museum at Hazelton, the Ksan people. We've lent them certain pieces and we expect requests from others."

Q. Can you tell me when the first railway was laid down? J.O.

A. In the 17th century in the reign of Charles I. It was made of wooden planks. Horse-drawn wagons were used on them. With the growth of the coal industry, cast-iron-edged rails were first used England in 1789. Experiments with locomotives to pull the wagons started in 1804 but this method of hauling was not a real success until 1825 when the Stockton-Darlington Line i- Britain was opened. Railways in North American came later.

WEAVER: Unorthodox strategist, subtly sarcastic

EARL WEAVER
. . . supremely confident

BALTIMORE (AP) — The outcome of the World Series remains in doubt, but one thing has become obvious: the contrasting personalities and baseball psychology of the two men pulling the strings from the bench.

Earl Weaver, manager of the American League champion Baltimore Orioles, is an unorthodox strategist, detached from his players, subtly sarcastic, supremely confident. He patiently waits for the opposition to make a mistake.

Chuck Tanner, field boss of the National League Pittsburgh Pirates, is a perennial optimist. He must have been born with a smile frozen on his face. He seldom criticizes his players. He manages by the book. He's one of the boys among his players.

After five Series encounters Weaver has the edge. His Orioles lead three games to two with the sixth game scheduled for Baltimore's Memorial Stadium tonight, with a seventh here Wednesday if necessary.

The opposing pitchers in Game Six are Jim Palmer for Baltimore and John Candelaria for Pittsburgh.

The beginning of the 1979 World Series got off to a bad start with bad weather, but that shouldn't be the case tonight. The National Weather Service at Baltimore-Washington International Airport says it should be mostly cloudy with temperatures in the high teens at gametime. The weather service adds the chance of rain is 20 per cent at game time.

Weaver, who got his first major league managerial job with the Orioles in 1968, has the credentials to back his approach to the game. He has won five AL pennants, six East Division titles and one World Series. He has been first or second 10 times in 12 seasons.

Tanner began managing with Chicago White Sox in 1971 after an apprenticeship in the minors and a 17-year playing career, including stints with Milwaukee Braves, Chicago Cubs, Cleveland Indians and California Angels. He held the White Sox job through 1975, then taking over Oakland A's.

The Pirates traded catcher Manny Sanguillen and $100,000 to the A's to obtain Tanner as their manager in one of baseball's more bizarre deals. This year he won his first National League title. Now, he's one step closer to coming back from a 3-1 deficit in a World Series, a feat accomplished by just three teams.

Playing by the percentages is another way these field bosses differ. The book is Tanner's credo. Weaver laughs at it.

"I never read the book," Weaver said earlier in the Series. "It's people's judgment what the book should be. I do what I think is the logical thing to do at the time."

Weaver received some disturbing news Monday. Don Stanhouse, his favorite reliever, is done for the Series with back trouble.

Tanner's 70-year-old mother Anne died Sunday. He will return home for her funeral Thursday.

The key to the Series from a Baltimore standpoint is pitching well enough to silence Pittsburgh's potent bats. Pittsburgh, although down three games to two, has 61 hits in 180 at bats. Baltimore has 43 for 171.

Second baseman Phil Garner and third baseman Bill Madlock each are hitting .500 and outfielder Dave Parker .429. For the Orioles, shortstop Kiko Garcia is at .429, outfielder Ken Singleton and catcher Rick Dempsey each at .333.

Maruk NHL goal leader; Trottier signs rich pact

Times News Services

Dennis Maruk of Washington Capitals, who scored four goals Sunday night against New York Rangers, finds himself tied with two Buffalo Sabres atop the scoring race after one short week of the 1979-80 National Hockey League season.

NHL statistics released today show Maruk has seven points from six goals, the league high, and one assist, while Buffalo's Gilbert Perreault and Danny Gare each has four goals and three assists. All three have played three games.

Charlie Simmer of Los Angeles Kings, Bobby Smith of Minnesota North Stars and Bernie Federko of St. Louis Blues are tied for fourth place with six points apiece. Simmer and Smith have three goals each, and Federko has two.

Goaltender Gilles Gilbert of Boston Bruins has the only shutout of the young season, a 4-0 blanking of Winnipeg Jets. Denis Herron and Michel Larocque, Montreal's netminding duo in the wake of Ken Dryden's retirement, played one game each in the Canadiens net and allowed one goal apiece for a league-leading team average of 1.00.

Meanwhile, there were several novelties of interest as the NHL grew to 21 teams from 17.

Winnipeg became the first of four former World Hockey Association teams to win an NHL game when they downed Colorado Rockies 4-2 Sunday night. Hartford Whalers were the first WHA veterans to earn a point, tying Pittsburgh Penguins 3-3 Saturday night.

Gordie Howe marked his return to the NHL in a Hartford uniform with two goals in three games, bringing his career NHL total to 788.

Minnesota and Montreal are the only unbeaten, untied teams. The North Stars have won three and the Canadiens two.

New York Islanders, the over-all points leaders last season, have lost both their starts and are one of six winless clubs. The others are Detroit, Hartford, Quebec Nordiques, Edmonton and Colorado.

The Islanders should be happier today, however. Centre Bryan Trottier, the most valuable player in the National Hockey League last season, signed a new, long-term contract Monday that was reported to be worth more than $2 million.

The club did not disclose details of the contract, but Robert Thornton of the Vincent Andrews Management Co. of New York, who represented Trottier in the negotiations, disclosed the financial aspects of it and said it was for five years, plus an option year.

"It is one of the biggest total packages anyone ever has received in the NHL," said Thornton. "There are no deferred payments. There are some incentive clauses. It's fully insured and guaranteed."

Trottier, 23, was the Islanders' No. 2 pick in the 1974 amateur draft, but did not join the club until the following year. At that time, he signed a five-year contract for between $50,000 and $100,000 a year. His salary was adjusted upwards two years ago.

"Bryan signed this because he wanted security and I guess he felt the team owed it to him," said Thornton.

In his first four years with the Islanders, Trottier amassed 155 goals and 269 assists for a total of 424 points in 309 games. His best year was last season when he had 47 goals, including five in one game against New York Rangers, and 87 assists for 134 points, won the Hart Trophy as the NHL's MVP and was named to the league's first all-star team.

Trottier admitted that "I did look elsewhere."

OBJECT OF ATTENTION for New York Jets during National Football League game Monday night was football fumbled by Minnesota Vikings. On this play, Jets Don Dykes (26) Ken Schroy (48) and Paul Darby (84) scramble to recover Viking fumble. Jets turned play into touchdown and went on for 14-7 victory.

Bud's message clear

NEW YORK (AP) — Coach Bud Grant didn't come right out and say it, but his message was clear: Bad officiating hurt his Minnesota Vikings almost as much as their seven turnovers did.

"I don't think the officials did a good job," Grant said after three fumbles and four inteceptions helped New York Jets post a 14-7 National Football League victory Monday night.

His main gripe centred on the kickoff after Chuck Foreman's one-yard touchdown run with 8:24 to play. Bruce Harper of New York fumbled and Robert Miller recovered for the Vikings.

"I never heard a whistle," Grant insisted. "There was no whistle. But they never called it a fumble."

Besides that, he added, "Ed Marion (the head linesman) was cursing at our bench. I'm sure it was a two-way street, but the officials are supposed to be above that."

Still, Grant couldn't deny that all those turnovers sealed the Vikings' fate, dropping them to 3-4 and keeping them two games behind first-place Tampa Bay Buccanneers in the National Conference's Central Division.

"We got a lot of yardage, but we didn't get many points," he said, reflecting on Tommy Kramer's 270 yards passing against the league's worst pass defence.

Kramer, a third-year pro in his first season as a starter, threw 48 passes — most of them short — and completed 28. The Minnesota running game was limited to 54 yards on 23 carries, with Rickey Young gaining 31 yards and Foreman just 13.

"We were more or less bending, but we didn't break," said Burgess Owens, the Jets free safety who intercepted two of Kramer's passes.

The Jets ran the ball down the Vikings' throats. They gained 183 yards on 41 carries, 78 yards by Kevin Long and 54 by Clark Gaines. Richard Todd completed nine of 13 passes for 72 yards.

Todd scored New York's first touchdown on a three-yard rollout just 4:56 into the game, five plays after Tim Moresco recovered punt returner Jimmy Edwards's fumble.

The winning points came with 5:15 left in the third period when Kramer overthrew Foreman on a broken pass pattern and strong safety Shafer Suggs intercepted the ball, then ran it back 32 yards for his first pro TD.

Good luck! And don't wait too long, Gordie

It's Gordie Howe time. Again. And the plea across the nation is that hopefully Gordie hasn't made a mistake to try one more time.

Those headaches he had earlier in pre-season may have been the warning he didn't want to hear . . . or heed. Because if they were, he didn't, and No. 9 is the old guy on left wing for Hartford Whalers of the NHL this year. Howe, who was quoted Saturday night as saying he would retire after this season, backed off from that statement Sunday. "It was just a moment where I possibly wasn't thinking. I know I will have to retire some day and that is inevitable. But at the moment, I'm going to keep going."

But it's always been that way with Gordie. He has been the one to make the decision. No-one else. And it hasn't always been easy, being the Superstar he once was and the Golden Oldie he now is, and having to decide if he could play just one more year.

Go back a while — back to the Royal Colwood Golf Club on Friday, July 17, 1970. It was the annual Gordie Howe golf tournament, sponsored by Eatons, and Gordie and his son Mark were in the field. In the field? They were the honored guests!

Gordie was also recovering from a wrist operation. He had undergone surgery to correct an old bone chip injury that had hampered his play with Detroit Red Wings the previous season and was believed responsible for an arthritic condition. The wrist had been in a cast for 5½ weeks. Arthritis in an athlete? "Yes, it's old age creeping up," he said.

The usual question: "Is this the end after 24 years?" At the time he was 42 years of age and you had to go back to Oct. 16, 1946, for his very first NHL goal.

He said then he would give it a try for "maybe two more years . . . then, if I can't keep up, I'll get out."

Gordie didn't turn in a card for his golf round that day and the wise ones nodded. "That's it. If he can't play golf how can he play hockey?"

Gordie didn't hold back either. He explained it this way. "I'd be lying if I didn't say it (the wrist) was sore." Actually he could hardly hold the golf club and virtually played the round one-handed. His approximate medal score: 100. Not bad.

He also made the point then that, although the wrist wouldn't be perfect, it would be an improvement on the old, that he had been lucky in hockey and maybe the luck would hold again; and, when the time came to quit, he would, and there would be no turning back.

Much of that luck occurred in 1950. Gordie was near death for two days after a collision with Ted Kennedy of the Maple Leafs when he was sent sprawling into the boards. He was rushed to hospital and shortly after midnight underwent surgery to relieve pressure on the brain.

The operation took two and one-half hours before the bulletin was flashed that "Howe came through surgery satisfactorily."

He returned to prove he had lost none of his talent, even in the face of other adversity.

In December of 1952 he suffered a broken wrist but came back the next season to win the NHL scoring championship. Superstar? he sure was.

Since then, of course, Gordie hasn't stopped playing although he may have been slowed down a couple of times. He and the family got something like $2 million to make Houston Aeros a power in the World Hockey Association. He justified his existence there and has since. He has won awards everywhere — MVP, all-star, scoring leader. You name it, he's been it for most of his 33 years in the game. So what's left to prove? Nothing.

It also should be recalled that on a couple of occasions in recent years he has been hospitalized with concussion and spinal traction and those are danger signs even for young bucks just starting out.

But it's his decision. He has said so often.

Ours is to say:

Good luck! But don't wait too long, Gordie — for everybody's sake. That term "sent sprawling into the boards" has an all too familiar ring to it.

Two Broncos fight for lead

Centres Doug Morrison and Gord Williams, both of Lethbridge Broncos, are battling for top spot in the Western Hockey League scoring race.

Morrison scored eight points last week to jump into first place, two ahead of Williams.

Morrison's two goals and three assists in an 8-1 win over Saskatoon Blades helped raise his total to 19 points, including a league-leading 11 assists.

Williams scored both goals in the Broncos' 3-2 loss to Calgary Wranglers, giving him 13 for the season, also a league high.

Centre Barry Pederson of Victoria Cougars and Portland's Dave Babych share third place with 13 points.

Cougars put their six-game winning streak on the line tonight as they host Saskatoon Blades at Memorial Arena.

Blades are coached by former National Hockey League defenceman Jerry Engele and are tied for fourth place in the eight-team Eastern Division with a 3-5 mark.

Hockey study killed

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal government has decided to scrap a $100,000 study of Canadian hockey.

The inquiry, launched by the previous Liberal government in September, 1978, on the advice of a joint Senate-Commons committee, has been examining all facets of the sport in Canada.

A preliminary report issued in May said that hockey was the fifth most popular sport among Canadians in terms of participation. The report cited over-competitiveness, violence, professional orientation and domination by adults as reasons why fewer Canadian youngsters are playing hockey.

The Globe quotes a source close to the inquiry as saying the Progressive Conservative government has decided the inquiry is not worth the cost.

"We will be turning in one final report on our findings as they relate to rules, referees and coaching," the source was quoted as saying, "but the thrust of what we were trying to do was get at junior hockey, and that has been all thrown out the window."

The study is led by Mr. Justice John Urie of the Federal Court of Canada.

Sport Minister Steve Paproski said Monday he would make an announcement on the matter in early November.

Scowls and stares

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Heavyweight boxers John Tate and Gerrie Coetzee, amid scowls and glares at each other, were pronounced fit today for their weekend heavyweight title fight.

Tate, a 24-year-old black from Knoxville, Tenn., and Coetzee, a white South African, also 24, meet Saturday in the capital of Pretoria for a 15-round bout to decide the successor to Muhammad Ali's World Boxing Association title.

Today's medical exam, a perfunctory check of pulse, heart beat and breathing, was carried out in the glare of cameras in a hotel supper club with the chairs and tables pushed back.

Tate and Coetzee didn't exchange words, just stares.

The official weigh-in is Friday.

Both fighters have slackened off their training for the fight, except for some road work, light sparring and shadow boxing.

Ticket sales were reported brisk, with nearly 70,000 of 85,000 available tickets already sold. Promoters expected a sellout by Saturday.

The fight is to be televised live by NBC in the United States. Fans in some 30 other countries in Europe, Latin America and Asia will also see the fight via satellite.

It was announced today that security will be extremely tight for the bout, with more than 1,200 security officials and 200 trained marksmen stationed around Loftus Versfled Stadium in Pretoria.

Golf rules get big facelift

EDINBURGH, Scotland (Reuter) — Extensive changes in the rules of golf come into operation on Jan. 1 following a review by the Royal and Ancient Club and the U.S. Golf Association, the Royal and Ancient announced today.

The changes affect every player, from top professional to the humblest of hackers.

Among major alterations are:

— The introduction of free relief from a ball embedded in its own pitch mark on the fairway;

— Ball to be dropped within one club length, instead of two, when taking relief from ground under repair, casual water, obstructions, etc.;

— The granting of permission to repair old hole plugs on the line of a putt;

In the case of an unplayable lie in a bunker, the option of dropping a ball outside the hazard at the spot from which the previous stroke was played, under penalty of one stroke, instead of the present requirement to drop under penalty within the bunker.

Among the other changes to a total of 25 rules or definitions is an easing in the penalty for playing a ball from outside the teeing area.

Under the existing rule a golfer is penalized this stroke and any subsequent strokes made before returning to rectify the error. From January, the penalty will be two strokes regardless of how many have been incorrectly played, but disqualification remains if the error is not corrected before the tee shot at the next hole.

The alteration in the embedded-ball rule brings all golfers into line with the professionals of the U.S. and Europe, who for some time have had local rules providing for such relief in tournament golf.

Two club lengths' relief will continue to be given under certain options of the unplayable lie and lateral water hazard rules. In this case a player incurs a one-stroke penalty in obtaining relief.

Effa and Painter join list of club champions

It's five down and just one to go in club championship play on district golf courses.

Victories by Reg Effa and the veteran Vic Painter have given Glen Meadows and Royal Colwood their 1979 champions. Only Cedar Hill remains undecided with Chris Dowds and Dan Soberg scheduled to meet in their playoff next Sunday.

Effa, four up after the morning 18, defeated Ed Beauchemin 6 and 4 in the Glen Meadows final at the weekend. Painter had a tougher time, defeating Brian Gandy one up in the 36-hole Colwood finale.

Champions declared previously were Doug Munro of Victoria, Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale and Tom Maftechuk of Uplands.

Ever since 1961, the Rules of Amateur Status have permitted winners of gift certificates to use them to defray club bills, such as dues, pro shop and beverage charges. The interpretation was changed at the Quadrennial conference between the U.S. Golf Association and the Royal and Ancient Golf Club last May. When a gift certificate is presented, it may be used only for exchange of merchandise.

And around the Las Vegas, they refer to Lanny as "the Canadian who shot a 71 at Lake Tahoe." The Lake Tahoe course is a monster, and scores in the 80s are much more common than 70s. Sawchuck scored an 81 in the first round of a recent intercollegiate tournament. Lanny came back the next day with the 71.

Sounders get a new owner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The North American Soccer League approved ownership changes Monday for three franchises — Memphis Rogues, Portland Timbers and Seattle Sounders.

All three teams will remain in their present cities under local ownership.

The Rogues were purchased by Avron Fogelman, a Memphis businessman who also owns the Memphis Chicks' minor league baseball team. Fogelman said that Rudi Schiffer would remain as the Rogues' general manager.

The Louisiana-Pacific Corp., a Portland-based company specializing in forest products, took over the Timbers and named Peter Warner as general manager.

And Vincent Coluccio, a Seattle businessman, purchased the Sounders. Coluccio said that Jack Daley, the team's general manager since 1974, would remain with the Sounders and that he has been appointed club president as well.

The action was taken at the opening day of the league's annual meeting, which will continue through Thursday.

Follow-on peril faces Aussies

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Australia stood on the brink of its first-ever follow-on against India after Sunil Gavaskar's team took firm control of the fourth cricket test Tuesday.

At the close, Australia was 258 for nine in reply to India's first innings score of 510 for seven declared and needed 53 more runs to avoid the follow-on. An innings win for India appeared to be a good possibility.

The Australians' brief hope of forcing India to bat again was provided by batting from Dave Whatmore. It vanished soon after tea when off-spinner Shivlal Yadav trapped him leg-before for 77.

Indian captain Gavaskar has two clear days — 11 hours of playing time — to capture the last wicket and get Australia out again in its second innings.

India is already leading 1-0 in the six-test series, having won the third test at Kanpur.

Terry extends victory streak

For the fifth straight week, Terry Bateman was first home Monday in the Greater Victoria High School Cross Country competition.

Bateman, of Mt. Douglas, ran the 7,000-metre distance at Beaver Lake in 23 minutes and .02 seconds. Teammate Keith Butler was second and Dick de Goede of Victoria High third.

Victoria High won team aggregate honors for the fifth straight time and leads the standings with 125 points. Claremont is second with 88 and Dunsmuir third with 77.

Bonnie Hutton of Spectrum captured the girls' race with a time of 13:31 over the 3,500-metre course. Karen Coutts of Belmont was second and Karen Rainey of Belmont third.

Belmont leads with 125 points. Claremont is second with 97 and Victoria High third with 85.

Wellman leads women's event

Victoria Flying Y's Pat Wellman, covering the women's two-mile course in 11 minutes, 23 seconds, and Victoria Mercuries' Terry Bateman, doing the men's four-mile run in 19:57, won the open events in the annual Bazett Farm cross-country races near Duncan on Sunday.

The popular event attracted 280 athletes.

Pair of titles to be at stake

HALIFAX (CP) — A fight between Clyde Gray of Toronto and Chris Clarke of Halifax for the Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight championships Nov. 13 has been sanctioned by both the Canadian Boxing Federation and the British Boxing Council.

Clarke won the Commonwealth title from Gray on a 10th-round technical knockout here in August. Gray's Canadian title, not at stake in the last fight, will also be on the line this time.

Foe for Too Tall

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Mexican fighter Jesus (Yaqui) Meneses will be the opponent for Ed (Too Tall) Jones when the former Dallas Cowboy football star makes his professional boxing debut Nov. 3 in Las Cruces.

"From what I understand, Meneses is full of guts, and a lot of people like him as a fighter," said Las Cruces promoter Frank Mirabal after announcing the 20-year-old Obregon, Mexico, boxer will face Jones.

Mirabal said the 6-foot-3, 215-pound Meneses has won nine and lost four as a pro with all nine victories coming by knockouts.

Jones played five seasons as a standout defensive lineman for the Cowboys before announcing a few months ago he was retiring from pro football to pursue a career as a heavyweight boxer.

The 6-9 Jones has been training in New York and has said he expects to be down from his football playing weight of 270 pounds to 235 pounds for his boxing debut.

Trios down Gulls

Oak Bay Trios came from behind to defeat Juan de Fuca Gulls 5-3 in a South Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena Monday night.

Trailing 1-0 after the first period and 2-0 part way through the second, Trios came charging back paced by three goals and two assists from Andy Turner.

Jim Rancier and Ken Buna were the other Oak Bay goalgetters. Bill Kersch, Dave Kjolberg and Dave Holmwood scored for the Gulls.

Turner scored his final goal into an empty net after goalkeeper Randy Vowels of Juan de Fuca was pulled for an extra attacker.

Vowels stopped 38 shots. Wade Jensen blocked 39 for Oak Bay.

Sandown ready for fifth season

By BILL WALKER

The fifth annual fall thoroughbred meeting of the Capital City Turf Club opens its run at Sandown Park, Wednesday and, except for a minor snag, all appears in readiness for the 16-day meeting.

Bad weather, in the form of fog, has delayed transportation of some horses from the mainland, but that problem should soon be overcome since all the stall space has been spoken for and, in the words of one CCTC official, "the horses are on their way."

The problem occurred when Vancouver's Exhibition Park was socked in by fog Friday night.

That happening caused nine of Friday's races to be run on Saturday because of the large amount of purse money at stake for the owners.

This made for a marathon day of 19 races, which was hard on everybody. The program started at 12 p.m. and didn't end until 9:29 p.m.

As a result, shipping plans to the Island were delayed for several owners.

Otherwise, the track is in fine shape after being refinished following the running of the standardbreds this summer.

Most local owners already have their stock here while several of the jockeys had arrived by Sunday in time for the Vancouver Island Thoroughbred Horse Society open house which attracted about 500 fans.

Eight-race cards will be the order on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, with nine races, or possibly 10, on Saturdays and the one holiday, Remembrance Day.

A new agreement with the B.C. Racing Commssion Commission has given the CCTC a guaranteed purse minimum of $1,500, the highest ever at Sandown.

CCTC president George Harknett called the action "most attractive."

Quinella wagering will be held on the first through the fifth races with Exactor wagering on the sixth through the eighth races.

Parade to the post on weekdays will be 1 p.m. and on Saturdays and Nov. 12, 12:30 p.m.

Feature events are the Colonist Handicap on Saturday, the Times Handicap Oct. 27; the Vancouver Island Derby Nov. 3, the Vancouver Island championship Nov. 10 and the Adios Amigos Nov. 12.

Every Monday will be "winner's day", losing Loto Canada, Western and Provincial lottery tickets granting the holder admittance; every Wednesday "ladies' day" and every Friday "senior citizens' day."

There will be Conmac bus service on race days leaving from Belleville and Douglas Streets (across from the museum) at 12 noon on weekdays and at 11:30 a.m. on Saturdays and holidays.

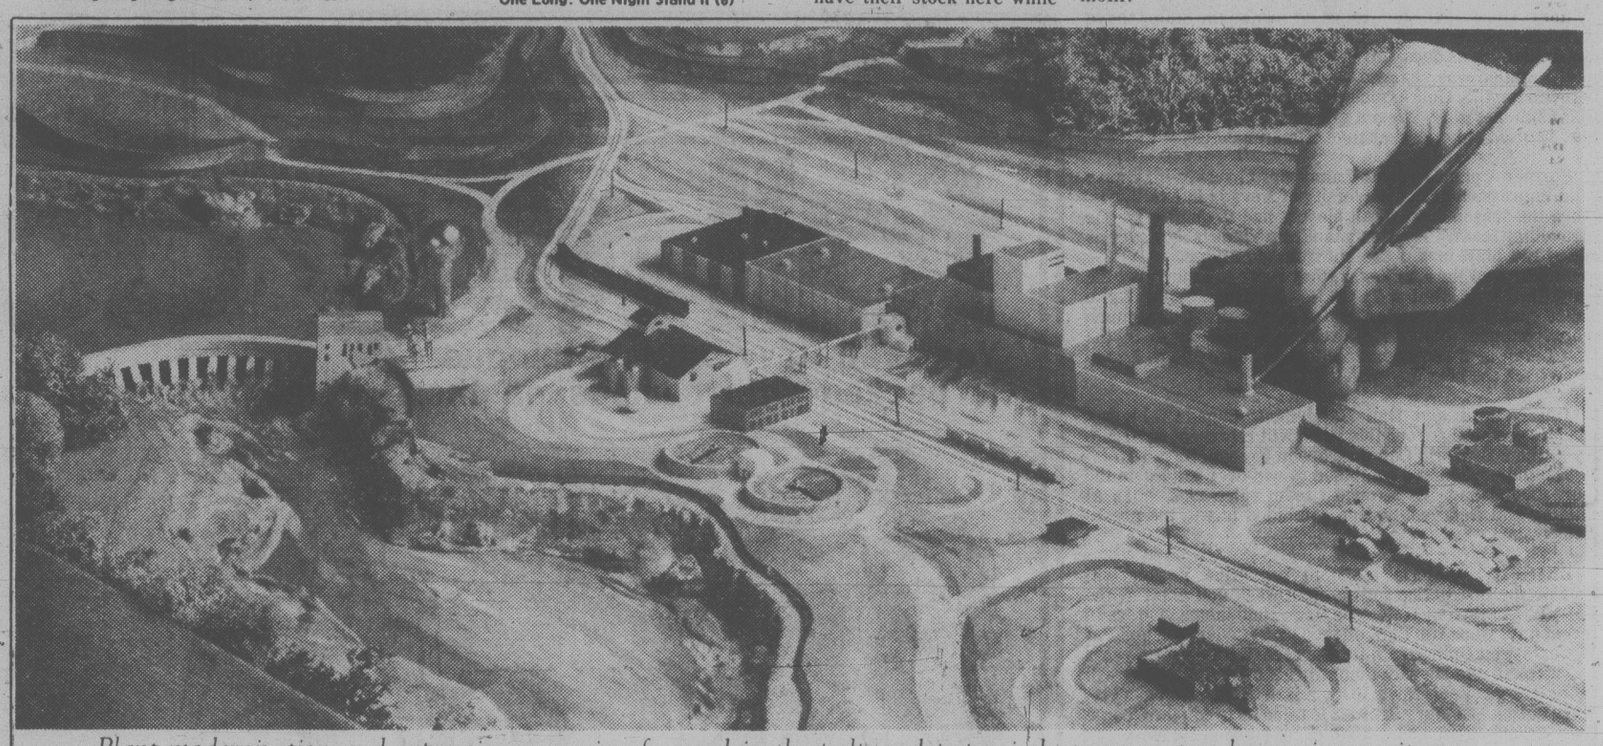
Fare is $5 and includes complimentary admission to the track.

Youngest squash champ

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuter) — Jehangir Khan of Pakistan became the youngest holder of the world amateur squash championship when he beat Britain's Phil Kenyon in the final Monday night.

Khan, 15, won a gruelling one hour and 15 minute battle, 2-9, 9-3, 9-3, 9-5.

The game swung Jehingir's way in the Second game after he changed shirts. He said later he felt more confident playing his lucky shirt emblazoned with the Pakistan motif.



Plant modernization and expansion are going forward in the pulp and paper industry; new tree harvesting equipment and new ways of doing things are possible because profits in the industry have improved. That means more jobs all around.

Profit: jobs

New investment in pulp and paper production is creating new jobs for Canadians in the industry and among suppliers. Better profits are starting to make things happen. There is more money to spend on advanced equipment, environmental controls and more efficient production techniques. Improved productivity will help Canada compete in tough international markets. And that matters: the forest industry supports one out of every ten Canadian jobs.

In Stephenville, Newfoundland, lunches will be packed again and Thermos bottles filled when around 650 people start back to work in a rebuilt paper mill and in woodlands operations.

In British Columbia, plant expansion in Powell River will create 700 construction jobs and 100 new, permanent jobs in the mill when construction is over.

Across Canada, forest products companies have announced plans to invest in modernizing mills, increasing manufacturing capacity, introducing new processes and harvesting equipment. This new investment adds up to billions of dollars over the next several years.

This job-making activity is happening because profits in the pulp and paper industry have improved.

The lion's share of Canada's pulp and paper is sold in the United States. The use of newsprint and other pulp and paper products has risen south of the border, so our industry has been going at full speed. These Canadian exports are paid for in American dollars, which have been worth considerably more than our own, increasing pulp and paper company profits in an unusual way. This increase in profits is beginning to help the industry catch up on the lean years just behind. But the industry cannot build a future on temporary exchange advantages.

Growth money

To compete with all comers in the global marketplace, the Canadian industry will have to invest hundreds of millions of dollars every year. Modern harvesting equipment, high productivity mills, new ways of doing things must be developed to help hold costs down. One year's good profit is not enough to achieve all these ends. Sustained healthy profit is necessary to support sustained healthy growth.

The pulp and paper industry is Canada's largest manufacturer: it brings in more export dollars and contributes more money to Canada's standard of living than any other industry — about $1,000 a year for each Canadian family.

The forest industry, directly and through its thousands of Canadian suppliers, creates one job in every ten in this country.

Phoenix Theatre production a sci-fi look into the future

An adaptation for the stage by University of Victoria theatre department's James Leard, takes as its format a science fiction magazine.

Under the title, Random Samples, it will be presented as the opening production of the Phoenix Theatre's mainstage season.

First performance is Wednesday at the Phoenix where, except for Sunday, it will run through Oct.27, curtain time 8 p.m.

Random Samples deals with the theme of society and the individual as we progress a few hundred years into the future and encounter new technologies.

The production will, like a magazine, have its feature articles but will also include facts, humor and flights of the fantastic as separate short columns.

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Religion is not a popular subject for movie comedies for obvious reason — namely offending millions of movigoers in the Bible belt and elsewhere.

But English writer-director-comedian Marty Feldman fearlessly has produced In God We Tru$t, subtitled "Gimme That Prime Time Religion," a zany expose of the TV Bible thumpers who appear on Sunday morning video across the country.

Feldman, who wrote the script, directed himself in the role of Brother Ambrose, a devout supporter of God's word in a silent religious order.

When the monastery goes broke, Ambrose heads for Los Angeles in search of Armageddon T. Thunderbird (Andy Kaufman), a reputed holy man and star of the travelling religious circuit.

Ambrose carries with him a letter of appeal for funds, $50, two pesetas and a ticket to the Seattle World's Fair of 1932.

A celibate monk who leaves the monastery a total innocent at age 45, Brother Ambrose has never seen a woman before encountering Louise Lasser (Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman) who plays a hooker. She brings the monk up to date in a hurry — and provides Feldman with his first love scene on screen.

Lasser makes the first move by diving beneath Brother Ambrose's robes in search of religious sanctuary when the cops raid her beat.

Brother Ambrose remonstrates with the hooker, saying, "I've never met a woman before, let alone had one on the premises."

Feldman, wearing green overalls and a blue baseball cap with silver wings (not unlike Mercury's) sprouting from the sides, skipped into a Hollywood restaurant after a day of editing In God We Tru$t.

Feldman's presence is unsettling. Due to an automobile accident, he says, his eyes focus in different and apparently unco-ordinated directions. While he studies a menu with one eye, the other is likely to be obsessed with a clock on the wall 180 degrees from the bill of fare.

When he observes you directly, his eyes tend to alternate focus, leaving the observee with a unique experience, not unlike watching a table tennis match at close range.

A sweetly gentle man, prone to calling men and women alike "darling," "luv" and "dear' in a semi-Cockney accent, Feldman takes his comedy almost seriously:

"The story is really about big-time religion in this country. I've researched the whole manifestation of commercialized religion from Billy Sunday and Aimee Semple McPhearson to Oral Roberts, Marjoe and Billy Graham.

"I found nothing I invested in the script was as outrageous as already exists among television's evangelists.

"Los Angeles is a hotbed for revivalists, evangelists, occultists, phrenologists, fringe gurus and all the rest. What can you expect of a town that has Disneyland at one end and Forest Lawn at the other? You can imagine what lies between.

"The theme comes out of my own anger at the exploitation of peoples' personal religious belief. I have flirted with Catholicism myself in the past but I never thoroughly succumbed."

'Find out what makes him tick'

Judge Leslie Cashman, saying the accused had told an unlikely tale in county court Monday, found 18-year-old Philip Edward Jordan guilty of breaking, entering and intent to steal at a ladies' apparel store on Dec. 16.

Jordan said he had been drinking beer the evening before, denied smashing a front door pane and said he didn't know why he had gone into the building where a policeman found him about 6 a.m.

Although he admitted being in Dalmy's (Canada) Ltd. at 709 Yates, he pleaded not guilty and said he did not know how the door glass had been smashed, just that he had walked in out of curiosity. He denied he was looking for things to steal.

Defence counsel Scott Marshall suggested it seemed unlikely, but noted there was no positive identification of the accused.

The judge agreed and said: "It's the most unlikely story I've heard in a long time. I don't believe a word of it."

Since there was no one else around at the time and the person who smashed the door was watched by two independent witnesses, it had to be the accused, Cashman said.

"There is no question in my mind the accused broke and entered or . . . (that) he intended to steal something."

Before passing sentence at 2 p.m. Nov. 14, Cashman said he wants a pre-sentence report on Jordan to see if a probation officer can "find out what makes him tick."

Michael George Ause, desk clerk at the Yates Hotel opposite the store, said he was on duty and watched while a person he at first thought was a drunk fidgeted about the shopfront for about 20 minutes.

He saw the person turn his back to the shop door, raise his right leg, kick the glass in with his heel and enter the store through the hole.

There was a light in the store and he was able to see the intruder thumbing through racked clothing, then go to the rear where he appeared to be looking for something.

Ause called police and kept them on the line while he described the intruder's movements. A police car arrived and a constable took the person into custody. He said he could not identify the person but noted he wore a jacket and new shoes and was neatly groomed.

From the sidewalk next to the hotel, restaurant employee Tracy Richstone, who had just got off work, also saw a young man kick out the glass and go in, and she also called police from a cafe a few doors away.

Neither witness said they could identify the accused.

Constable William Laughlin said the accused was the person he ordered out of the store at gunpoint.

When the store was searched two bags of clothes, stuffed mostly with sweaters worth a total of $215, were found on a counter.

Jordan said he had spent the evening drinking beer with a friend at the Racquet Club, then drove around alone and stopped a couple of times for coffee. The second time he left his truck in front of the Yates Hotel while he went to a cafe in the next block, and on returning noticed the broken glass in Dalby's.

He said he walked around in the store for several minutes and may have handled some clothes but could not explain his actions.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old man was charged in provincial court Monday with five offences in connection with a Sunday incident at a Saanich grocery store.

Todd Elmer Axelson, 1849 Chimo Place, was charged with attempted armed robbery of Tan's General Food Market, 1652 McRae, conspiring with a juvenile to commit armed robbery, using a disguise during a holdup attempt, possession of a knife dangerous to the public peace, and theft of a vehicle valued over $200.

Saanich police were called after a citizen noticed two persons pulling something over their faces in the bushes near the grocery store at about 9:45 p.m.

Judge Blake Allan remanded Axelson until today for possible bail hearing and election of trial method.

Two Victoria teen-agers were jointly charged with three weapons offences following another Sunday incident.

John Patrick Aitkens, 19, of 2549 Dowler Place, and Stanley Allan Smith, 18, of 1712 Newton, were charged with possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public peace, carrying a shotgun concealed in a blanket, and possession of a firearm without a permit.

They were remanded in custody until today for possible bail hearing and election.

A 17-year-old was charged with a Sunday break-in at the Saanich School District office at 9751 Third Street in Sidney.

Steven Henry Perry, 2634 Amelia, was released on his own undertaking but was ordered to obey a midnight curfew until the case is resolved. He was remanded until next Monday for election.

One of two youths who pleaded guilty to a Sept. 18 break-in received a jail sentence while the other was given a suspended sentence and 10 months probation.

Norman Edward Murray, 21, and Ronald Bruce MacDonald, both of 3296 Galloway, were remanded by Judge Fred Green for a pre-sentence report.

Murray, who was remanded in custody, received a three-month jail term after Green noted Murray was on two sets of probation at the time of the break-in.

A taxi driver heard glass breaking at 2:30 a.m. and saw two youths in the 1000-block Douglas, Crown counsel N.K. Varma told the court. Victoria city police caught MacDonald inside Sussex Half Size Dress Shop, 1011 Douglas, and caught Murray in front.

Murray was on three-year probations handed out April 1, 1977, in Vancouver and May 25, 1978, in Burnaby when suspended sentences were handed out for theft and seven counts of breaking and entering. He also was given a suspended sentence and placed on two years probation Feb. 1, 1977, in Vancouver for a break-in.

Both were ordered to take alcoholic counselling or treatment while on probation.

Green fined 21-year-old Ronald Allen Lee Johnston, 2011 Idlemore, $500 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said the incident occurred about 1:30 a.m. Feb. 10 at Happy Valey and Metchosin roads.

Johnston and the victim, Gerald Norman Filgate, emerged separately from the same dance in the Metchosin Hall and Filgate opened the door to a truck parked facing the wrong way on Happy Valley Road.

Johnston's vehicle struck the door, knocking Filgate down, and continued north. Filgate was then hit by a second vehicle, which also didn't stop, while he was being helped up by his brother.

Johnston was intercepted by an off-duty police officer shortly before 11 a.m. as Johnston was on his way to the Sooke RCMP detachment to report the accident.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Raymond Allan Hudson, 19, of 963 Walford, $500; Steve Salach, 35, of 1322 Glenridge, $450; Theresa Denham, 52, of 1328 Miles, $450; John Edward Robson, 30, of 6579 Troupe, $400; Herman Matthew Underwood, 34, of 2525 Mount Newton Crossroad, $350; and Richard Gordon Gray, 48, of 2457 Sooke, $100.

In addition, Gray was fined $100 for refusing a breath test demand and was also ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

Policewoman too persistent - drug trafficker's lawyer

A persistent undercover policewoman was blamed by the defence Monday for landing Daniel Bernard Radick, 32, in county court for trafficking in marijuana.

Radick, of Colwood, pleaded guilty to selling about a gram of hash oil for $20 to the plainclothes policewoman Oct. 23, 1978, at a day care centre at 2415 Quadra.

Defence counsel Donald Bohun of Ladysmith suggested the case was not far short of entrapment and said Radick would not have done it if the officer had not been so persistent.

He said she tried to buy more of the drug at a later date but without success.

Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay cited a preliminary hearing transcript to show the conversation at the time of sale was brief.

Bohun suggested since it was Radick's first offence and an isolated instance, there should be a nominal sentence for his client, a former printer and honors English student who is now a truck driver.

Judge M.L.T. Drake concurred and fined Radick $500.

A Minneapolis man was less than happy with Florida officials who released him from jail at midnight, putting him on the street wearing only rumpled pajamas and carrying his wallet in a paper bag. Robert Nichols, 51, was arrested in on a charge of committing petty theft. He was being treated for diabetes at Polk General Hospital — where he was issued pajamas — when he was picked up and transferred to Orlando. "We looked everywhere for his clothes," Polk County booking clerk Arnetha Tucker said. "All we could find was his shoes."

A worldwide appeal is being made to descendants of Scottish people evicted during the notorious Highland clearances in the last century to contribute to a memorial to Donald MacLeod, author of Gloomy Memories, a book that exposed the ordeal suffered by the Highlanders and their families. MacLeod, a stonemason, lived in the crofting township of Rossal in Strathnaver, where today as a direct result of the clearances not a building stands. Strathnaver museum trustees Robert MacKay of Newlands, Bettyhill, and Joseph MacKay of Talmine, Tongue, are sponsors of the appeal.

Ruggiero Ricci — all decked out in a Little Lord Fauntleroy suit — stepped onto the stage of New York's Mecca Temple and stunned the audience with his violin virtuosity. abby

Dear Abby:

I just read the letter from the 14-year-old boy who was afraid he had VD and didn't want to tell his parents, and I just had to write.

I am a 15-year-old girl who had a similar experience. I thought I had VD. I cried for days. Finally I decided the only thing I could do was to tell my mother. Abby, that was the hardest thing I ever had to do. When I told her we both cried. I begged her not to tell my father, but she said she had to. Some pretty cruel words were exchanged among the three of us.

The next seven days were the toughest I've ever experienced, but it also proved how much my parents really loved me. They stood by me the whole time. When we finally got the doctor's report, we were relieved to learn that it wasn't VD -- it was another kind of infection.

My friends thought I was crazy for telling my mother, but it was the best decision I ever made. It really brought us closer together, and we got to understand each other better.

Abby, please keep encouraging kids to take their heavy problems to their parents. It's not always the easiest way, but it's the smartest. Thanks for letting me have my say. I believe you really do care.

Been Through Lots

Dear Been:

Thanks for the testimonial. Read on for a letter from a girl who wasn't as lucky as you:

Dear Abby:

Thank you for that letter in your column warning kids about VD. I wish I had seen something like that when I was 14.

I am a 16-year-old girl who just underwent a very painful and serious operation as a result of gonorrhea.

I had to have a hysterectomy.

Abby, I don't 'sleep around.' I have only one boyfriend.

I also have a very ugly seven-inch scar down my stomach. The worst part is knowing that I will never in my life be able to bear my own children.

Not many kids realize how serious VD can be. Please inform your readers of this. And if you print my letter, please don't use my name. Thank you.

Paid A High Price

Dear Abby:

The 57-year-old wife of the impotent 61-year-old 'spiffy dresser, great dancer, and big spender' has a lot to learn. (She can't understand why 'the other woman in his life' finds him so attractive.)

There are literally thousands of women who would be overjoyed to have such a companion, especially if he can't do anything in bed! What a pleasure it would be to have a man take me out and show me a good time, and not wrestle me to the floor when the evening is over!

Another thing the poor wife doesn't seem to know is that many a man who is impotent at home is a powerhouse with women other than his wife.

Voice of Experience

The cloak of power

By AL FORREST

Women must wear a uniform of power if they want to beat men at their own game, says Barbara Riley of Seattle, marketing manager for Pacific Northwest Bell.

Men display their power through the suits they wear, she told a women's seminar in Victoria.

Women must wear impressive clothes if they want to be accepted as business equals.

The most effective uniform for a woman is a two-piece skirted suit and blouse.

Rated best is the combination of awhite blouse and charcoal gray suit, she said, but other color combinations can also be powerful.

She was addressing the first Women In Business seminar sponsored by the Victoria branch of Sales and Marketing Executives International of Victoria.

Having selected the proper uniform, Mrs. Riley said, the woman is ready to move ahead on her new job.

Begin slowly, she said. The process is called "getting your feet under the desk."

First, find out if one of your subordinates tried and failed to get the same job.

"She may have a terrible dislike for you. Take her to lunch early. Get her on your side."

aThen, find out where the deadwood is. Find out how they got into positions of power and why they are not succeeding.

Find out who the comers are and who wields the real power.

At first, be non-commital. Even let yourself be bullied a little. Give verbal instructions rather than written ones because it will be less embarassing if they are not carried out.

"In other words, get the lay of the land. Find out the existing system, the customs, the personalities."

Don't rock the boat over small things. Save the boat-rocking for the really big issues. And don't storm the beaches trying to prove on the first day that you are a super woman and top executive material.

That only creates enemies on the first day.

Be accepted before starting to take over the whole office.

When you are accepted, begin to take power by giving and accepting help. Start doing favors and expecting favors in return.

And always repay a favor.

"Now that you've got your feet under the desk and favors are coming and going, you are ready to make your big move."

Associate with people who have just a little more authority than you have and gradually become accepted as an equal.

Always have a calm, self-confident manner.

It is counter-productive to come rushing into a meeting trying to create an impression that you are a very important person.

In fact all it does is create an impression you are not well-organized, Mrs. Riley said.

People are more impressed and more comfortable if you are relaxed and quietly confident about what you are doing.

Deportment is more important than technical knowledge.

It's like a bridge game. You don't want to play with people who slouch, who grab their cards before they're dealt or who mess up the playing surface.

Be relaxed and confident and neat, even in small things, and always play by the rules.

"Watch what the pros do, the ones who are already winning. Most of these people will be men. Learn from the enemy. I don't mean men are my enemy, don't get me wrong.

"But they are my competition. They made the rules and we have to learn to play their way if we want to win."

Finally, she said, grab for the symbols of power, wherever they exist.

Men are impressed by big offices, especially a big corner office. If there is one available, go for it, even if you have to fight.

If you have a secretary, let her get things from the file, don't hunt for things yourself. A woman executive will tend to go into a file while a man asks his secretary to get it. There is a big difference.

And some of the things men do that appears to be part of goofing off is really a grab for the symbols of power.

These include flexible (but not short) working hours, long lunch breaks and the haircut.

Working men almost always get their hair cut on company time. Meanwhile, women will wait until after work or Saturday to go to the hairdresser.

"Girls, get your hair cut during working hours! It is an important symbol of success."

When all these things are achieved, the woman in business will rise through the ranks and will eventually achieve clout.

"Clout or power simply means I have the ability to get what resources I need, when I need them, to get the job done. That's productive power and it's good. Believe me, you want it!"

Business clothes make businesswoman, says Bell Telephone's Barbara Riley

Postal order check begun

CALGARY (CP) — Remember that genuine leather handbag you ordered through the mail for an astonishingly low price? The one that never came?

Or the record advertised on TV that did arrive, but was damaged and scratched and couldn't be played?

Every week, Canadians are deluged with direct-mail advertising blurbs for every product under the sun. They come in the mail, on TV or in magazines. Send money and the manufacturer sends you the product . . . sometimes.

Other times the item just doesn't arrive. Or it doesn't work if it comes.

But for everyone who has known the frustration of trying to rectify these wrongs with letter after letter to far-distant manufacturers, help has arrived.

It's called the Canadian Direct Mail Marketing Association, a self-policing association of direct mail merchandisers.

"This year we've been averaging about 200 consumer complaints a week and I would estimate our success rate is around 90 per cent," says association president Frank Ferguson of Toronto.

"That still leaves about 80 unhappy consumers a month out there, but we're trying to improve our record."

The association, which started its consumer help line about a year ago, deals with all complaints about direct-mail advertisers.

Direct mail is big business with some of the industry giants, like K-Tel of Winnipeg, ringing up annual sales in the multi-millions. And it's particularly big business in affluent Alberta which has become a testing ground for new direct-mail products.

"Most of the big companies are members of our association," Ferguson says.

"Of the 80 companies using the mail for advertising, 60 to 70 are members of the association and we look after complaints about them."

Fly-by-night companies were smearing the reputation of the industry, so the association was formed to police the industry, he explains.

"Most companies are honest, but we're talking about an incredible amount of business and there are communication breakdowns.

"When the consumer can't get anywhere with the company, they can complain to us and we step in. We cut through the red tape and go right to the top."

Ferguson says the association's policy is, first, to ensure that the customer gets his goods and, second, find why the foulup occurred.

"And we have a high success rate because we don't give up; we never stop. We just keep on pounding until they do something."

Speak up if you don't understand

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I recently learned that I have osteoporosis. I have been very distressed about this, mostly because I don't completely understand it. It sounds like a terrifying condition and I don't know where it's going to lead to. Can you tell me more about it?

Mrs. E.W.

Dear Mrs. W.:

It's astonishing how often a patient leaves a doctor's office without really understanding the diagnosis and the planned treatment for a condition. When patients fail to pursue their inquiries, the doctor has a right to assume that there is no area in their discussion that is not completely clear and understood.

This lack of interpersonal communication can do the patient a double injustice. First, because a patient leaves the office in a state of confusion, there is a mounting anxiety about a condition the name of which may be frightening even though the condition may not be important.

Second, it has been found that patients that do not thoroughly understand the nature of their condition very often fail to maintain the medical regimen that a doctor prescribes. Very often they will interrupt the taking of medicines without any rational reason for doing so.

Perhaps doctors should ask this single question before a patient leaves their offices. "Do you understand everything I have been saying? If you don't, let me repeat it." Shyness at a time like this serves only to disrupt a vital aspect of the communication process.

Now, about osteoporosis. It is an imposing-sounding word which, when not thoroughly explained, can induce marked anxiety. All it means is that there is a decrease in the mineral and protein content of the bone. It has been found that women in the menopausal and post-menopausal periods tend to have less calcium in their bones. The reason for it is a complicated one. It involves the body's utilization of calcium and is intimately related to hormone deficiencies and imbalances.

Dear Doctor:

I had an eye operation and was told that I wuld be out of the hospital in two days. Instead, I was there for 10 days because of an infection in the eye. Whose fault was that?

Miss G.T.

Dear Miss T.:

There is no possible way to fault anyone when such an unpleasant experience occurs. Fortunately, instances of infection after surgery are extremely rare. The use of antibiotics before, during and after surgery has reduced post-operative complications to a bare minimum.

Men deny looks

TORONTO (CP) — Ask a man about his divorce, his income or his hernia in this age of honesty and openness and you can expect a reply.

Ask him about his looks and his brain turns to jelly.

Looks? Who, him? Women have looks. A man doesn't have a face, so much as a mind and personality around which a few fleshy bits are accumulated.

That is the impresion that men — particularly those known as Beautiful Men — like to convey. And it's one of the reasons why being beautiful, for a man, may be as enjoyable as being caught in a body rub parlor during a vice squad raid.

"Looks," says Moses Znaimer, head of Toronto's CITY Television, "are the dirty secret in every man's life. Everybody knows they're important, but nobody ever talks about them."

The sin of the Beautiful Man is that he makes looks difficult to ignore. He is a Michaelangelo among primitive carvings.

What makes a man beautiful?

Beauty itself — as perceived by the modern eye — comes in for a beating in a recent book, the Naked Face, edited by Toronto doctors Lloyd Carlsen and Bernard Slatt.

This is how the book describes good looks acceptable for the man in the 1970s:

"The bones of the face must stick out. The cheek bones should be prominent and shiny, covered by a taut layer of skin, the eyes a little sunken in their non-fatty orbits, the cheeks a little hollow and pursed. The look of the '70s could be called the Dying Look."

The muskox lives only in northern Canada and Greenland. Canada's 10,000 muskoxen are found mostly on Banks and Ellesmere Islands in the Arctic Ocean. It is probably that the ancestors of these muskoxen originated in north-central Asia about 1,000,000 years ago.

The muskox has been hunted extensively by man since prehistoric times. The eskimos were able to kill large numbers of muskoxen by using dogs to run them down. When the white man arrived with his guns, the muskox was pushed to the brink of extinction. Fortunately, in 1917, the Canadian government placed this animal on its protected list of endangered species.

For information on the appearance, environment, and behavior of the muskox, write to the Scientific and Technical Publications Section, Canadian Wildlife Service, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0E7. Ask for the free folder entitled, Muskox.

White rum, gin, and vodka are no longer setting the pace in the distilled spirits industry. Today, liqueurs are the industry's fastest growing segment. Needless to say, interest in liqueurs — and especially in cooking with liqueurs — is extremely high.

Bon Vivant is a 32-page booklet that shows how apricot brandy, cherry whisky, and other liqueurs can enhance good food. The recipes in this booklet were developed by head chefs from leading hotels across Canada. Opposite each recipe is the name of the contributing chef, as well as a full-page color photograph of his culinary masterpiece.

To receive a free copy of this fine booklet, write to Bon Vivant, Box 271, Station "U", Toronto, Ontario, M8Z 5P1. The booklet is available in English and French.

Hot foods should be kept hot at 60° celsius or higher (140° F or higher). Similarly, cold foods should be kept at 4° celsius or lower (40° F or lower). In between is the danger zone — the temperatures at which bacteria can grow best.

When food contains a large number of bacteria, food poisoning can result. The symptons of food poisoning are about the same as the symptoms which we associate with the 24-hour flu: fever, cramps, vomiting, and diarrhea.

For tips on how to prevent food poisoning, write to the Educational Services, Health Protection Branch, Dept. of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0L2. Ask for their free folder called, Food Poisoning.

COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON

Dear Dr. Powell:

Please tell me when is the "safest" time for a girl to have intercourse without the use of some sort of birth control method? Is it true that the chances of pregnancy are almost nil if you have sex during or immediately after your period? Also, what age do you have to be to obtain birth control pills? Do you have to have a prescription no matter what age? What about other birth control methods?

Answer: Determining the "safest" time during a cycle involves more than just figuring a safe period just before and after your menstrual period. This method, often referred to as calender rhythm, has a high failure rate and is not one that should be either encouraged or recommended. It is widely practised and will work for some couples, particularly if the woman has a regular menstrual cycle which she can accurately predict. But there are a number of factors beyond her control which can delay her period or cause it to come early.

There are natural family-planning methods that are effective. They rely on understanding your boby and noting certain symptoms that predict the time of ovulation. There are two symptoms which are used as indicators of "safe" times in a cycle. One of these is the basal body temperature and the second is the character of the cervical secretions or mucus. It is essential to be taught this method by experienced counsellors.

(The Victoria Birth Control Clinic does not teach this method but is eager to counsel youth on birth control and pregnancy.

"This is not a reliable method for teenagers," says a Victoria clinic worker. "It is a good method for motivated couples — but it takes lots of practice."

The Victoria clinic welcomes youth inquiries and can be reached at 385-3351, local 70.)

There is no specific age at which a girl can be given birth control pills. Many people feel that if you are old enough to become pregnant, you are old enough for them. However, some clinics won't prescribe them for a girl under sixteen. Other clinics will help a young woman of any age.

You can call Planned Parenthood for this information. The telephone number in Victoria is also 385-3351, local 70.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 15-year-old male homosexual, and although I've never lied to myself about what I am, I've never really told anyone about it, except for my best friend, and our friendship has never been quite the same. I would much rather be heterosexual but since I'm not, I'm not going to try to be.

The problem is this: I don't really have anyone to be myself with. There is this really handsome guy to whom I'm deeply attracted, but I don't know him very well and I can't exactly ask him out. I don't know if he's gay or if any of my friends are. How do I get to meet this guy and find out if he's gay?

Answer: Yours is a common problem among homosexuals. Partly this stems from our society's overt rejection of that sexual orientation. What's unusual in your case is our age. I am not used to 15-year-olds who are adamant that they are homosexual, that they don't want to be but won't try to be anything else.

In any event, if you are set in these attitudes, I would suggest you contact organizations like Gay Youth Toronto, or your community homophile association, who are used to problems such as these.

Frankly, I don't think that at the age of 15 you should be so adamant about these things (maybe about anything). You will be having many experiences which will change your opinions, values and thinking; perhaps you could take a more "open" stance toward your sexuality and life, at least for the time being.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am 14 years old. I went with a boy for a few months and cared for him very deeply. He said he felt the same way. He was the same age. He was always wanting me to go all the way with him, and I always told him 'no,' because I just didn't feel right or ready. One day be broke up with me because of this. I love him so much I am simply crushed. I don't think I'll ever stop hurting. I want so badly to get him back, and the only way would be to have sex with him. If my parents ever found out, that would be it for me. I don't want to go against their beliefs and I still don't feel right or ready. I'm scared to death. Please help me.

Answer: If you're scared to death, don't want to go against your parents' beliefs and don't feel right or ready, these are all indications that you should not have sex with him.

There is another indication, but one that is hard for you to see. Part of the reason you are so hurt is that you really do love him, and the kind of love he is giving back to you is not as good as your love, because he is insisting that his love should be bought with your body. So the great hurt you have to live with is that your love is not really reciprocated.

Jewel sales up with gold

TORONTO (CP) — With the price of gold hovering around $400 (U.S) an ounce this week, the price of a simple gold wedding band is running about 80 per cent higher than last year's ring.

For example, a 10-millimetre, traditional 14-carat gold band in an average finger size sold for $250 last year. It's now selling for more than $400.

Nevertheless, gold fever hasn't slackened. Canadian jewellers report that business in gold jewelry is as good, if not better than ever for all items, including chains, bracelets and rings.

"Gold jewelry has been a growing market for some time and it hasn't slowed down," said Tony Lalingo, merchandise supervisor of Simpsons' jewelry department. "It's unbelievable, considering the price of gold."

Jack Bunting, manager of Secrett Jewel Salon, said he thinks "that jewellers have actually been more intimidated by the price of gold than the public."

Instead of customers resisting prices, Bunting said, Secrett has enjoyed a 20-per-cent increase in business over the last year and has had no problem selling its most expensive gold pieces which cost up to $20,000.

Barton Ellis, regional manager for Birk's Jewellers, said that although it's difficult to determine whether the company is selling more gold merchandise, he's certain it isn't selling less, despite price increases.

Bruce Smellie, president of the Canadian Jewellers Association, said that "historically, it seems that whenever there are price increases in gold, there's an increased interest in buying gold jewelry."

"Certainly there's an awful lot more gold jewelry being sold today than when gold was pegged at $35 an ounce."

Although jewellers aren't complaining, many are baffled by the continuing clamor for gold.

"I almost expected a decline in interest," said a spokesman for Toronto's Gold Shoppe. "I don't know if people are buying because they see gold jewelry as an investment or if they just fear that the prices will go even higher.

"However, I do think that people feel there's no advantage to leaving money in the bank. Interest rates aren't keeping up with inflation."

People view gold as having a timeless, intrinsic value, said Ellis of Birk's.

"People subconsciously feel they're making an investment when they buy gold."

However, jewellers agree that gold jewelry isn't a good investment for someone interested in quick resale for straight dollars and cents. Gold bullion, in the form of coins, bars or wafers is a much better investment idea.

"Gold jewelry is only worth what you can receive in cash for it. People are not necessarily going to get an appraised price when they want to sell," said the Gold Shoppe spokesman. "Even you always have to find a buyer for a particular piece."

The price of gold jewelry in stores is high, but it's a bargain compared with what's expected in the next few months.

Smellie of the jewellers' association advised shoppers to make their gold purchases now, rather than wait until Christmas.

No 'railroad' job on zone change

Residents will get a second chance to speak out before Oak Bay council deals with a proposed bylaw amendment to change zoning in a prime block on Beach Drive.

About 30 people showed up Monday night at a public hearing called to hear submissions on the future use of the nearly triangular block bounded by Beach, Goodwin and Currie, at present zoned to permit buildings up to four storeys plus basement and site coverage of 30-35 per cent.

In addition, council received a number of letters from concerned residents, some of whom were unable to attend the hearing.

"It is not our intention to railroad any zoning bylaw through no matter how popular or unpopular it may be," said Mayor Brian Smith.

He said there was no development proposal before council but it was realized that a large building or buildings on that site would affect the neighborhood and could result in undesirable structures.

The proposal to reduce height by one storey and site coverage to as little as 28 per cent will be advertised again so that further submissions may be heard in not less than 30 days. Provision for underground parking and setback dimensions would go unchanged.

"Council's concern is that there not be a wall of development there," Smith said when residents of Goodwin Manor, across the street, asked whether consideration could be given to the rear appearance of any new development.

Spokesman Munroe Dale noted the existing apartment fronts on Beach and extends almost to Goodwin, exposing its rear to Goodwin Manor. Residents were concerned about garbage boxes and rooftop structures such as elevator house.

Smith said three storeys plus basement is ample size for new development and council would attempt to keep the amenities of the block as they are.

One resident suggested the amendment could allow for lesser development on the site, such as townhouses.

Council was asked what led to the proposal to change zoning when no construction is contemplated. Smith said it was noted the provincial assessor had raised the land value in that block considerably, apparently in the belief that it would be redeveloped with multi-storey buildings.

Ald. Neil Swainson said it is Oak Bay's desire to plan development of the municipality and not to let the assessor or persons applying for development permits to do it.

Night flight protest by Oak Bay

Mayor Brian Smith of Oak Bay said Monday he is protesting to the Canadian Transport Commission poor night flight service at Patricia Bay airport by airlines connecting to Vancouver.

The move may be followed by a formal protest against cutbacks for airport improvements which aldermen fear have been made by the new federal government.

Smith, who is also MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head, said he is protesting elimination of the 10:55 p.m. flight from Vancouver by Air Canada, which had made it difficult for passengers who have had late business engagements or whose connecting flights are late to get back to Victoria the same night.

Families who have been to Hawaii find it impossible to return the same day, making it necessary to take overnight accommodation at Vancouver or charter a small plane to fly them to Patricia Bay, he said.

"Air Canada is very anxious to get us off on flights to the east and overseas on lucrative long-haul traffic that goes out in the morning," Smith said. But return traffic is ignored.

He hopes the Clark government puts some westerners on the board of Air Canada, to end such treatment.

"If not, the more power to Pacific Western."

Ald. Doug Watts said flights from the interior also miss the last remaining scheduled flight to Victoria. But he was more concerned about inadequacy of the airport at Patricia Bay. Passenger and baggage handling facilities are lacking and there is no flight control radar, he said.

He said Oak Bay and other Greater Victoria municipalities would probably have to make special representation on this subject.

Canada Order to Morris

Joseph Morris, former president of the Canadian Labor Congress, will be made an officer of the Order of Canada by Governor-General Edward Schreyer at an investiture in Ottawa on Oct. 24.

Morris, who lives in retirement at 4257 Thornhill here, is now in Geneva in connection with his work as president of the International Labor Organization governing body. He retired as president of the CLC in April, 1978.

Muggers mug each other

TORONTO (CP) — Honor among thieves? Not among two crooks who mugged each other during the weekend.

Police said two muggers jumped a man behind a hotel, knocked him unconscious and took his wallet. Then the two started arguing.

One hit the other over the head, stole his wallet and took off in his partner's car, police said. But the getaway car collided with two vehicles, went over a curb and ripped out almost 17 metres of fencing.

Charged with robbery is George Donald Parsons, 19, of Toronto. David Peter Murrin, 30, no fixed address, is charged with two counts of robbery and one charge each of impaired driving, refusing a breath test and dangerous driving.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♡	1 NT	Pass
3 NT

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

In notrump contracts, declarer often must choose which of two suits to play first. Unfortunately, there is no simple formula to govern these cases, and declarer does best by relying on common sense rather than a general rule.

Let's say South is in three notrump and wins West's heart lead with the queen. Immediately he faces a crucial decision — whether to attack diamonds or clubs first. Declarer knows from the bidding that he is contending with a heart suit held by East.

If you look at all four hands, it becomes obvious that the contract can be made by tackling clubs first. South forces out East's king of clubs, ducks the next heart lead, and East's remaining hearts wither on the vine. Declarer eventually makes four notrump.

But if South tackles diamonds first, he goes down. West wins with the ace, returns a heart to South's ace, and East later takes the lead with the king of clubs to put the contract down one.

At issue is the question of whether South, who does not see the East-West hands, should be expected to lead clubs first. Actually, he should, but not because the suit is longer. That is merely a coincidence.

South should reason that if West has the king of clubs, the contract is ice-cold. He therefore automatically assigns that card to East and dispossesses him of it at once. Attacking clubs must be right regardless of who has the king.

It is true that if East has both the king of clubs and ace of diamonds, the jack of clubs play at trick two will prove ineffective. But in that case a diamond lead first would also fail. The point is that the club lead will make the contract if it can be made, while the diamond lead may or may not make the contract.

Abortion committee swamped by volume: MD

By DEREK SIDENIUS

So many women are seeking abortions in Victoria that the joint Victoria General Hospital-Royal Jubilee Hospital therapeutic abortion committee can do little more than rubber-stamp approval of the requests.

Dr. David Lintern, a former chairman of the committee told a coroner's inquest Monday that between 25 to 30 applications for abortions are made each week.

He said the three doctors on the committee, who meet once a week over a lunch hour to review the applications, have to rely heavily on the referring doctors' recommendations in approving the requests.

He said approval is so customary that certificates authorizing abortions are normally filled out prior to the committee's meeting.

Lintern was testifying at an inquest into the death of an infant boy who died 10 hours after being born by caesarian section to a 32-year-old severely retarded woman on Sept. 18, 1978.

The baby was in its 23rd week of gestation when the operation was performed by Victoria obstetrician Dr. Michael Rippington.

The inquest, now into its second week, was ordered by B.C.'s chief coroner Dr. William McArthur who is presiding over the hearing.

Lintern told the jury he and the other committee members at first turned down a request for an abortion by Rippington.

The request was supported by Dr. John Martin, medical director at Glendale Lodge where the mother is a patient, and Dr. Michael Penn, a consultant physician to Glendale who examined the woman after the pregnancy was first detected.

Lintern said the committee was concerned about the time element and noted the hospital guidelines suggest abortions should be considered only if the gestational age of the baby is less than 20 weeks.

However, he said, he went over the guidelines again after Glendale staff asked the committee to reconsider its decsion and he discovered the hospital does not bind the committee to any time limit.

He said the Criminal Code of Canada also does not specify time limits on when an abortion can be performed.

He said he found the guidelines were at best vague about the matter.

Accordingly, he said, he reversed the earlier decision after discussing the case with one of the other committee members.

Rippington had testified earlier in the day he was not aware of the change in decision and had gone ahead, after consulting with hospital executive director Jim Fair and Royal Jubilee director of medicine, Dr. J.L. Le Huquet, to terminate the pregnancy for medical reasons, a procedure that didn't require the committee's authorization.

Fair testified he also was unaware that the committee had altered its stand. He said he agreed with Rippington's subsequent action but added the judgement call caused him "to lose some sleep."

Fair, in rsponse to questions from lawyer Chris Randall, public trustee representing the interest of the dead baby, acknowledged there was confusion over the committee's handling of the case.

He said there is a "terrific onus" placed on the committee and that it would be advantageous to be able to refer cases to someone else when there is doubt an abortion should proceed or not.

"It would be nice to get an appeal committee together," he said. "Now we're spending a thousand manhours to find out if the judgement call was right or wrong."

"Do you think the legislation is adequate?" McArthur interjected.

"On the surface it is adequate," replied Fair. "But it is still subject to some abuse."

Lintern felt the legislation should be made clearer.

Under questioning by Vancouver lawyer A.D. Thackray, representing five doctors involved in the case, Lintern said there are few guidelines on therapeutic abortions in Canada.

What guidelines there are can be interpreted so broadly that they are practically meaningless, he said.

"I think the government has to make its mind up about how easy or difficult it wants abortions to be in Canada and give some direction to doctors," he said, adding that up to now the government has side-stepped the issue.

He noted that under the criminal code, abortion committees can authorize an abortion if there is danger to the health of the mother. But the definition of ill-health is so general it could apply to almost anything.

"Basically we don't have a law," he said. "What's the point of having a committee to decide on a definition that doesn't exist."

He said abortions are often approved more for moral and philosophical reasons than strictly medical ones and because of that supported a suggestion that abortion committees should be widened to include non-medical persons.

The inquest also heard testimony from Catherine Mary Brennan, a registered nurse who looked after the baby, under the direction of pediatrician Dr. C.K. Chan, to the time it died.

She said that in her opinion everything was done to keep the baby alive.

Chan testified last week the baby responded well to treatment for the first six hours or so but then its condition started to rapidly decline. The infant finally died of hyaline membrane disease, a respiratory ailment common among premature infants and babies born by caesarian section.

The inquest is continuing.

Air and marine radio ops on job, but work to rule

Federal government radio operators on Vancouver Island and across Canada are working to rule but they're staying on the job.

John Hart, regional representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said today the operators can legally strike but that no one is off the job.

About a dozen Vancouver Island sites are affected by the work-to-rule campaign authorized by PSAC president Andy Stewart after a Monday strike vote by the 1,100 radio operators.

A spokesman for Transport Canada in Ottawa said the strike will not have an initial impact on airports, but over a period of time, will slow things up.

The operators, who provide navigational help, weather information and flight-planning services at 113 airports across the country, have been without a contract since July, 1978. Members of the union also operate a Coast Guard messenger service.

In late August, they held a series of rotating strikes and work-to-rule campaigns that cancelled some flights, but closed no airports.

In the previous disputes, air traffic controllers handled most of the operators' duties at the major airports.

Smaller airports, which have no air traffic controllers, were hardest hit in the summer walkouts.

The operators are asking for a two-year contract with a 15-per-cent wage increase. Current annual salaries are $13,328 to $15,500. Supervisors receive $21,600.

In September, the operators turned down a conciliation board offer that would have given them an eight-per-cent increase.

Site on Blanshard for rail-bus station?

Mayor Mike Young of Victoria proposed Monday a new transportation terminal bringing buses and the E & N railway together at Blanshard and Pandora.

Young made the proposal at a meeting of the steering committee to consider a new transportation centre for Victoria.

Committee chairman John Cooper of the E & N said the mayor's idea is for B.C. Hydro buses and Pacific Coach Lines to combine their terminals there and bring the E & N in, possibly by tunnel.

"That site certainly has merit concerning the buses," said Cooper. But the problem would be to bring rail passenger service in.

As a railway employee, he said he hasn't any hangups about trains travelling through the city — trains have used Store Street in Victoria for more than 50 years — but "the mayor has this thing about trains on the streets."

The committee also endorsed a motion by Young and Mayor Mel Couvelier of Saanich to write Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm asking that the provincial government not take any hasty decisions on new bus terminals for Victoria.

Cooper said the the Urban Transit Authority and PCL are each planning a separate terminal. PCL has to have a new location by July, 1981, the most urgent deadline of the three major carriers.

With the three all looking for new locations, "Victoria has a golden opportunity to take a step forward in transportation," said Cooper, "but I just have a fear we are going to blow it."

It's essential that the E & N be plugged into the regular transportation network of Vancouver Island, he said, or else much of the recent work on improving passenger rail service will be in vain.

Cooper said elected representatives agree an integrated transportation centre would be an asset for Victoria.

"But no location should be designated for this purpose until the matter is fully discussed with elected representatives," he said.

"It should be properly planned and no hasty decision on a location should be made."

Rotary going Down Under

The Rotary Club of Victoria is looking for outstanding young business or professional men who would like to take part in a group study exchange team to visit Australia from Feb. 20 to March 30 next year.

Travelling expenses will be paid by Rotary International and by the Rotary host district, which is District 971 and covers New South Wales and Canberra.

During the trip, the team (which includes a Rotarian supervisor) stays at Rotarian homes en route.

During the six-week tour of the district, the visiting Canadians will be expected to talk to Rotarians at their luncheon meetings, as five young Australians did here earlier this year.

Each team member speaks about his own field or profession for about 12 minutes.

Applications should be made to the Rotary Club of Victoria at the Empress Hotel, 383-7014. The deadline is Oct. 26.

Broadway at it's best here in Ain't Misbehavin'

By AUDREY JOHNSON

When a Broadway musical show is good it's the best in the world. And when it's black and up-beat, it's better than that.

Ain't Misbehavin' sent a near-capacity audience out of the Royal Theatre Monday, man, woman and child, in a state of euphoria.

Tonight's is the second and final performance and no one who values a great theatrical experience should miss it. But if there's a single ticket left by showtime it'll be a miracle.

Only two shows in my recent memory were on the same exalted level as Ain't Misbehavin'; but neither Bubbling Brown Sugar nor Chorus Line came to Victoria.

It's a revue type show built around that greatest of all stride pianists, that evocative writer of up-tempo, blues and comic songs, Fats Waller. It began as a cabaret show at the Manhattan Theatre Club. It went on to Broadway and the winning of numerous high-prestige awards. It's still playing there.

What we have in Victoria is the official touring company; a virtuoso ensemble of five singing-swinging actors with musical director-pianist Charles H.Coleman and a perfectly balanced accompanying jazz sextet.

If one could make any complaint at all it would be to wish it was longer. It could be half as long again as the 30-odd numbers and the audience would doubtless continue on its feet, whistling and shouting for still more. Not that is less than average length. It just seems shorter.

Creator-directors Richard Maltby Jr.and Murray Horwitz have not cluttered the production with an obvious story-line. Yet a story is told, peopled with characters, variable in mood, filled with the spirit of Harlem and its denizens from the late twenties through the early forties.

Exuberant vitality, great voices, nimble feet, intense and instinctive rhythm are shared by the five performers — three women and two men. Nothing is forced; the comedy, like the rhythm seems to bubble up from some natural but rare inner well-spring.

Adrienne West, meshed in a single spot at dead centre, never moving, sings Squeeze Me, and brings to the number a perfectly balanced blend of comedy and poignancy. Clent Bowers and David Cameron are broadly comic in Fat and Greasy; and the company is marvellous in The Jitterbug Waltz, while Clent by himself makes a great thing out of Your Feet's Too Big.

The finale, a compilation of songs made famous by Waller, includes I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter, Two Sleepy People, I Can't Give You anything but Love and It's a Sin To Tell a Lie. All smash hits in their time and again last night.

The show is as deliciously costumed as it is set. The set design is uncomplicated but as sleek and effective as everything else about the performance.

The piano glides soundlessly across the stage as Coleman plays. Two thin lines of light outline twin arches and when at one point the filmy curtains part, there is the band occupying the space within on a forward-gliding platform. Other than that one is only dimly aware of their presence behind the scrim.

There is in truth, no part of this show which is not as close to perfection as is ever likely to be seen and heard in this city.

Thrown back at censor

JAKARTA (Reuter) — A 14-year-old boy who stabbed a 10-year-old girl to death after seeing a sex film has been made the legal ward of the state censor who approved the film for public showing.

The boy said he tried to make love to the girl after watching a film entitled The Results of Free Love. He told a court he stabbed her after she resisted his advances.

jack beastall

There are a few things worth knowing about plants and their root systems at this time of year when so much moving and planting is being done.

One is that roots do not extend to great lengths in a soil that is continuously wet.

A willow, which revels in a moist soil, does not make extensive roots in a bog, although in a garden its roots will travel 30 to 50 feet to reach a drain tile with water in it most of the year.

In everyday gardening we can use this fact to advantage.

A good root system will build rapidly if the plant has to reach out for food and moisture. In other words, the plant will become established sooner if the soil around its roots is not constantly wet.

Proof of this is readily found in our climate.

Plants set out in the relatively dry and warm soil of early fall will make remarkable root growth in a week to ten days, whereas the same plants set out in cold and wet spring soils will sometimes die of root rot, or fail to make any headway until the soil temperature increases in late June to early July.

This means the loss of one season's growth, and can also result in the loss of those plants which must have a good root system to supply necessary moisture and food during the summer months.

In practice no plant should be allowed to wilt excessively. For some plants this is fatal. On the other hand only enough water should be given when planting and immediately afterwards for the plant's requirements until the new roots are active.

My method is to set the plants and work the soil well around the roots with the hands until the hole is half filled, then apply water until it covers the filled-in soil. After this has drained away, the dry top soil is used to fill the hole. The tip growths are watched for the next few days to detect any wilting before more water is applied. When the need is indicated give another good soaking.

The above method was used this year, and last year when moving eight-foot shrubs that were set out 10-to-12 years ago about 14 inches apart as rooted cuttings.

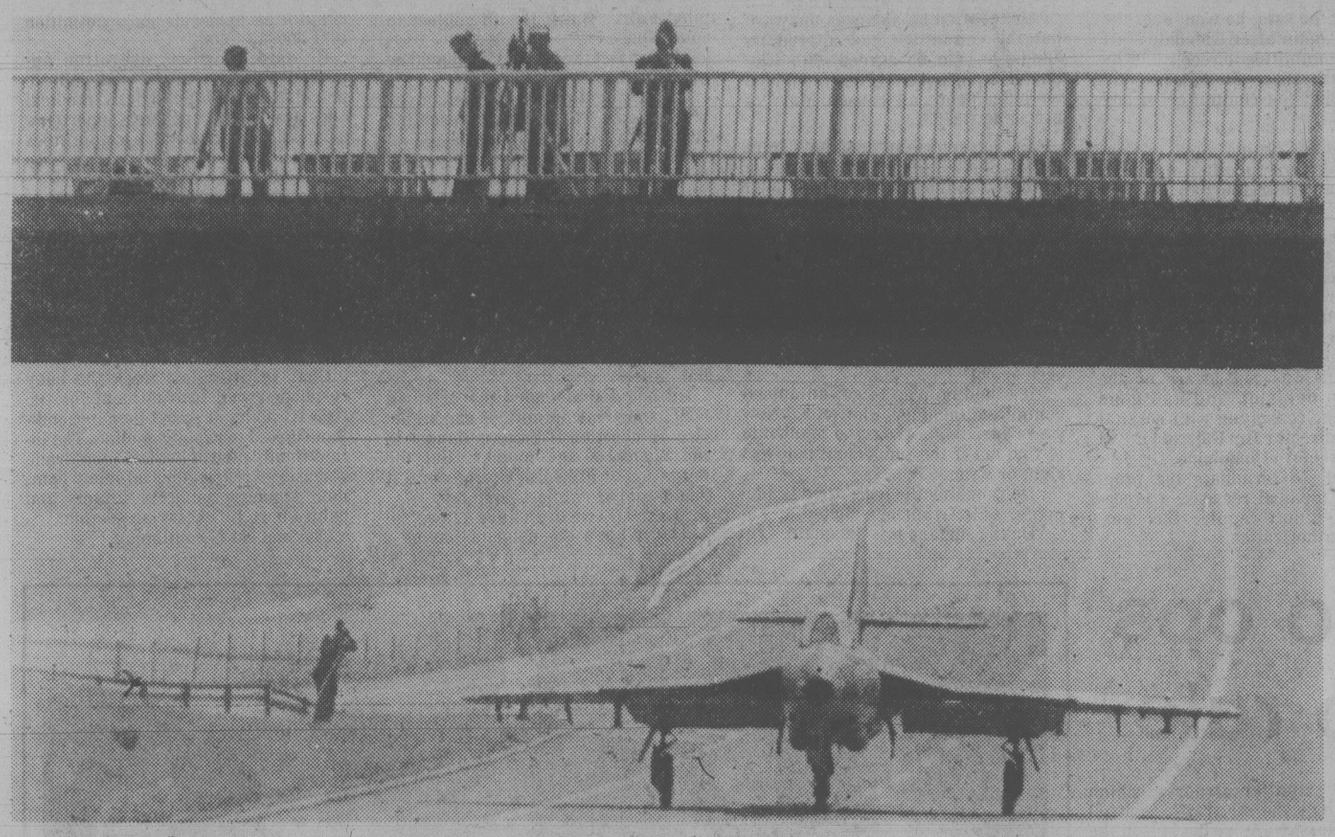
There was considerable root loss due to the close planting, and the clay planting area had received no water after the spring rains ceased.

We ran into the highest temperatures of the year a day or so after the work was started. These conditions necessitated a mist spray over the foliage two to four times a day, but care was taken not to add any water to the soil. Misting was also used later in periods of low humidity and high winds.

These fifteen shrubs, plus 50 others taken from containers, established quickly, flowered well, and the berry bearing types made a grand display by fall. There were no losses.

A few weeks after transplanting we returned to the normal root soaking once every 15 days.

Patriotic Front agrees to rejoin peace talks



SWISS AIR FORCE Hawker-Hunter aircraft rolls down a highway near Zurich during recent training manoeuvres. Part of Operation Forte, purpose of exercise was to prepare air force pilots to land and take off on highways in the event of destruction of airbases in wartime. Here highway overpass give ringside view of the goings-on.

LONDON (AP) — Guerrilla leaders decided today to return to the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks after Britain threatened to negotiate exclusively with the biracial government of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa to implement a new constitution for the war-ravaged country.

Officials of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance said they would rejoin the talks after seeking clarification of British and U.S. offers to pay compensation for nationalized white-owned land.

The Patriotic Front said the move did not mean they were bowing to the "dictatorial methods" of Lord Carrington, Britain's foreign secretary who is conference chairman.

The Front leaders made the announcement shortly before Carrington was to open separate independence negotiations with Muzorewa's delegation.

The guerrillas' move opened the way for them to accept the British draft constitution — the only terms on which Carrington will allow them to rejoin the talks about transitional arrangements prior to new elections.

On Monday, after guerrillas had refused to meet the third deadline on accepting the draft, Carrington said he could wait no longer and would discuss implementing the draft with Muzorewa.

The main objection to the constitution was that it would compel a new black government to pay compensation for seized land and to guarantee pensions.

The guerrilla leaders accused British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government of collusion with Muzorewa ever since her Conservative party came to power last May. They also refused to say whether they would now give Carrington a firm yes on the constitution.

Meanwhile, Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere has called an emergency summit conference of the five black-ruled African "front-line states" for Wednesday to discuss the deadlocked Zimbabwe Rhodesian peace conference in London.

"There is an atmosphere of crisis in London and this atmosphere is utterly artificial," he said.

Nyerere is the influential chairman of the front-line states, which support the Patriotic Front guerrillas.

Presidents Samora Machel of Mozambique, Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana and Jose Eduardo Santos of Angola are expected in Dar Es Salaam Wednesday.

Two economists share Nobel Prize

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics was awarded jointly today to an American and a Briton working in the United States.

The $190,000 prize went to Theodore Schultz of the University of Chicago and Sir Arthur Lewis of Princeton University for pioneering research into the economic problems of developing countries.

The Alfred Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science, a 10-year-old addition to the original Nobel prizes, was given to Schultz and Lewis "for their pioneering research into economic development research with particular consideration of the problems of developing countries" according to the citation by the Royal Academy of Sciences.

Shultz, born in Arlington, S.D., in 1902 and an agricultural economist from the outset, has specialized in the "human factor" in economics.

He took his doctorate at the University of Wisconsin in 1930 and has been Charles Hutchinson professor at the University of Chicago since 1952, and professor emeritus since 1972.

Lewis, born at Castries on the West Indian island of St. Lucia in 1915, has been James Madison Professor of Political Economy at Princeton University in New Jersey since 1968. He is a British citizen.

Lewis is a leading figure and pioneer in developing-country research who started to publish important works on the economics of poor countries in the 1950s.

The analysis of development problems by Schultz and Lewis have a number of features in common, the awarding body noted in a statement.

The economics prize, set up by the Central Bank of Sweden in 1969, has been heavily dominated by Americans. The United States has had nine laureates in the 10 years the prize has been awarded. The two most recent were Milton Friedman, like Schultz from Chicago University, in 1976, and Herbert Simon of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh last year.

Four Nobel awards have been distributed so far this year and of nine laureates five have been Americans, just like last year. Two have been Britons, one Pakistani and one German.

Two of the most prestigious prizes remain. The peace prize will be awarded separately in Oslo by a Norwegian parliamentary committee Wednesday and the Swedish academy of letters will announce the coveted literature prize on Thursday.

Leader of Iran ruled supreme

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran's Council of Experts has passed a constitutional clause granting Ayatollah Khomeini ultimate control over public and military affairs as supreme leader of a theocratic state to replace the monarchy toppled eight months ago.

The six-point clause, approved Sunday after a week of often-heated debate, names Iran's religious leader head of the armed forces and gives him a power of veto over the election of a president.

It also empowers him to declare war in consultation with a military council.

A leading liberal clergyman, Ayatollah Makarem Shirazi, threatened to leave the council chamber Sunday after hardliners criticized him for voicing reservations about the clause.

Shirazi had argued that the proposed subservient role of the president would go against the sovereignty of the people.

The Council of Experts now is understood to be considering three alternative for the election of a president. He could be appointed by the religious leader, elected with the leader's approval, or elected from a list of candidates drawn up by the leader.

Philippines oil boycott to protest 'massacre'

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran is suspending supplies of oil to the Philippines because of the alleged massacre and oppression of Moslems in that country, Oil Minister Aliakbar Moinfar said Monday.

Moinfar told the official Pars news agency: "The massacre of Moslems in that country by its regime made us cut our supply of oil and until the massacres and oppression of the Moslems of that country stop not one drop of oil will be delivered."

Iran was supplying 10,000 barrels a day of crude oil to the Philippines under a contract signed last April. This represented about five per cent of that country's needs.

Philippines Ambassador Rafel Ileto said he had received no official notification of the decision to cut supplies but had advised his government that relations were not conducive to negotiating a new contract for 1980.

Ileto said: "there is no such thing as massacres of Moslems in the Philippines, they should not base their reports on a small group that came here."

Ileto was referring to the visit earlier this year by a delegation of Moslem separatists from the southern Philippines.

Moinfar also told Pars that Iran has instructed its Washington Embassy to take legal action against news agencies and publications in the U.S. which recently reported a drop in Iranian oil production.

Even frisbees are going to pot, med men fume

By HARRY NELSON
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — U.S. pediatricians Monday issued a report calling attention to new products that encourage marijuana use among children.

These range from comic books that tell how to hide marijuana to pot-smoking paraphernalia that look like space guns.

Legally for sale in some stores, the report states, are frisbees with a hole in the centre for a marijuana cigarette so that one may play and smoke at the same time and a Christmas stocking that contains not only candy but cigarette paper and "practice grass."

These items are for sale in "head shops" that cater ostensibly to adult pot users and also in some record shops and clothing stores, according to the report. They are also advertised in publications aimed at drug users.

Dr. Albert Pruitt of the American Academy of Pediatrics' Committee on Drugs said the committee is "outraged that an industry that promotes drug use by the young is prosperous."

In a keynote address at the academy's annual meeting here, Dr. Robert Petersen of the National Institute of Drug Abuse said that although there was still controversy about the effect of marijuana on adults, "There is unanimity of informed professional opinion concerning marijuana use by children."

Among these effects are interference with immediate memory and intellectual performance in ways that impair thinking, reading comprehension and verbal and arithmetic problem-solving, Petersen said.

There is also "no question," he said, that marijuana interferes with complex psycho-motor skills such as driving a car.

Although there have been no studies of the effects on classroom performance of being high, users themselves acknowledge that pot smoking interferes with learning, Petersen said.

Marijuana use prior to and during the school day probably interferes with developing healthy social and emotional habits because it encourages a chemical escape from frustration rather than a tolerance for it, he said.

Petersen cited national survey statistics indicating that 16 per cent of all youngsters in the 12-to-17-year age group had used marijuana during the previous month.

Recent studies in Maine and Maryland showed that one in six high school students is smoking pot almost daily.

Pruitt said many pediatricians and parents are unaware that pot-smoking paraphernalia is available to youngsters. Laws that prohibit their sale to minors are as ineffective as laws that prohibit the sale of cigarettes to minors, he said.

Capital calm after colonels' coup

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Two colonels reputed to be moderates favoring order and democracy ousted the head of El Salvador's right-wing military regime, called on leftists and rightists to end months of violence and promised both a part in the country's future.

Cols. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez and Adolfo Arnoldo Najano forced the resignation of President Carlos Humberto Romero after their supporters took control of five key military bases Monday. One person, an army captain, was reported killed.

The coup leaders were reported to be military instructors in their 40s.

San Salvador, the capital, was calm, and the rebels said they are in complete control of the country's 14 military departments.

The new regime said in its first communique: "The high command of the new revolutionary government places its confidence in Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez and (Col.) Adolfo Arnoldo Najano but will soon announce the names of other members of the military-civilian junta that will rule the country."

It said the armed forces will "direct the destiny of the country, taking into account the participation of everyone during the time that will permit first establishing the basis and atmosphere proper to establish a democracy and assure free elections where the will of all Salvadoreans is reflected."

The communique said Romero was ousted "in view of the anarchy in the country as a consequence of the activities by extremists which (the government) has been incapable of resolving."

Last ditch effort to salvage Times

LONDON (UPI) — The Times of London, Britain's most influential daily and one of the world's leading newspapers, faces permanent closure Wednesday unless management and print union officials reach a last-minute contract agreement.

There was little word on progress of the four-day negotiations, held under a deadline of midnight Wednesday.

The Times management said it would permanently close the Times, along with the companion The Sunday Times and three sister publications, unless a settlement were reached with the National Graphical Association.

The 194-year-old Times, an institution as British as toast and marmalade, was shut last November 30, 1978.

Mexican jailers 'extorting' funds

OTTAWA (CP) — Mexican officials are extorting thousands of dollars from the families of Canadians jailed in Mexico, says a Progressive Conservative MP from Alberta.

Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) made the charges Monday while recommending the federal government initiate a study in Canada on abuses in Mexican jails.

The MP said there is evidence to show the incarceration of Canadians in Mexican jails is used "to extort money from parents to the total amount of their bankroll."

Many persons were left bankrupt and in debt.

He said testimony before a special committee of the United States Senate found the same abuse that Canadians have been subjected to: torture, extortion, cadres of prisoners running prisons and sharing in the extortion take, investigations that take almost two years.

Woolliams, justice critic of the then Conservative Opposition in the last Parliament, referred specifically to the case of two Edmonton men arrested in Mexico June 30 for joy riding in a boat without the owner's consent.

Kurt Thomas, 29, and Mark Rollin, 20, were held for three months in filthy cells without being charged.

Thomas's parents visited him in jail and their costs in various fees and expenses totalled about $10,000 before the men were released.

Charges that were laid after the men had spent almost three months in jail were withdrawn.

Woolliams said he does not defend the actions which prompted the arrest, but he does condemn what followed their arrest.

He said the Thomas family paid more than $4,000 in lawyers' fees and in restitution for a boat which was returned undamaged. The Thomas's complained the lawyers did nothing.

Death penalty bill eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Conservative backbenchers is planning a concerted effort to have the death penalty reintroduced and expanded to cover all kinds of premeditated murder.

Alberta MP Peter Elzinga (Pembina) said in an interview Monday that some 20 to 30 fellow MPs likely will work together to get capital punishment restored in a free vote in the Commons in the near future.

Canada has not had an execution since 1962. The law made provision for the death penalty for the murder of on-duty policemen and prison guards until the House voted for abolition in a free vote in 1976.

Prime Minister Clark is opposed to capital punishment. But he has promised to allow another vote on the issue free of party discipline if the matter is introduced by way of a private member's bill.

And the new Conservative government says it will make it easier for private members' bills to be debated in the Commons.

Some surveys have said a majority MPs in this Parliament support a return of capital punishment in one form or other. That does not mean a return to hanging murderers.

Elzinga said he and his colleagues have been talking about the best way to raise the issue. Two other points also remain to be resolved.

"Some members feel we should go to a referendum on the issue, and we are going to sit down and discuss that."

Elzinga said he is prepared to go along with the idea of asking Canadians in a referendum whether they favor return of the death penalty, although he personally is cool to the idea.

He said he believes the public already has shown its strong support for the "supreme penalty."

"To me, it's obvious how the Canadian people feel from the various polls that have been taken."

The other point left to be resolved is whether the noose should be replaced with lethal injections or some other means of death.

"Some feel that hanging is just too dramatic, and I'm not too keen on hanging myself," Elzinga said.

The group planned to decide its over-all strategy today.

Elzinga was reluctant to say who planned to attend the meeting, but he mentioned Don Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) and Don Blenkarn (PC—Mississauga South) as members of the group.

Fleet plans by spring

OTTAWA (CP) — Marine Transport Minister Robert Howie hopes to be able to unfurl plans next spring to put this country back in business among deep-sea fleets.

Howie told Maurice Dionne (L-Northumberland-Miramichi, N.B.) in the Commons Monday that the Conservative cabinet has approved a gradual development of a merchant marine.

He said his officials are discussing with shippers and labor unions what policy changes would encourage the development of a fleet.

The country's merchant marine now numbers three vessels, a sad decline from the post-Second World War era when the merchant navy had 600 ships.

The Tories promised during the May 22 election campaign to revive the merchant marine and repeated that pledge in last week's throne speech.

But Conservative officials said the government is primarily interested in increasing the use of Canadian vessels in coastal and Arctic shipping.

Judge annoyed by legal delays, dismisses Sky Shops charges

MONTREAL (CP) — Charges of influence peddling against Clarence Campbell and Gordon Brown, two key figures in what has become known as the Sky Shops affair, were dismissed Monday.

Sessions Court Judge Yves Mayrand said he made the ruling because of "intolerable" delaying tactics by both Crown and defence lawyers and added that Brown and Campbell "are liberated but not acquitted."

Both Campell, former president of the National Hockey League, and Brown, a Bahamas-based businessman, still face conspiracy charges in connection with the affair.

Judge Mayrand also noted that the influence-peddling charges could be re-instated by the crown at a later date.

But in the meantime, he said, the delaying tactics have led to a postponement of the defendents' preliminary hearing 32 times since the charges were laid more than three years ago.

The charges, which were also laid against the late Montreal businessman Louis Lapointe, allege the three men gave a $95,000 bribe to Liberal Senator Louis Giguere in exchange for extension of a lease for the Sky Shops duty-free store here at Dorval airport.

Judge Mayrand said the case had not moved "an inch" in three years.

"An undue accumulation of delays affects the image of justice and leads to unjust and unjustifiable blame towards the judge," he noted.

"A sane administration of justice cannot tolerate such practises; and to continue to grant postponements without knowing whether one day the case will proceed, would be to sanction such practises."

When Crown prosecutor Bernard Beaudry indicated he did not want to proceed with the influence-peddling charges until the conspiracy charges had been through the courts, the judge said he became convinced it was best to drop the influence-peddling charges.

The conspiracy charges were laid in 1977, a year after the influence-peddling charges.

These charges allege that Campbell and Brown conspired with Giguere and Lapointe to give the senator a $95,000 benefit from the sale of 5,000 shares in Sky Shops Export Ltd.

Mailing deadlines

OTTAWA (CP) — Christmas parcels to be sent by surface mail to Europe, South America, Central America and the West Indies should be posted by Friday, the post office said in a press release Monday.

Parcels for Great Britain and Northern Ireland should be mailed before Nov. 9.

Deadlines for surface mail to Africa, Asia and Australia have already passed, but parcels can still get to those destinations by air if mailed by Nov. 23.

The deadline for Europe, South Amecica, Central America and the West Indies by air mail is Nov. 30 and for Great Britain and Northern Ireland Dec. 7.

Cynics erode competence

MONTREAL (CP) — Public cynicism about politicians and civil servants is undermining their ability to lead and administer, says Michael Pitfield, who as clerk of the federal Privy Council was Canada's most powerful civil servant for four years.

"I have seen very few (politicians) leave Ottawa without their reputations, family lives or at least their pocketbooks damaged by the experience," he told the Canadian Club here Monday.

Civil servants, he said, "are becoming targets of opportunity for the opposition and the media and vested interests.

"Far from defending them, ministers are finding it convenient to off-load blame onto them and leak to the media rumors of differences with them, and generally encourage gossip degrading to them."

PITFIELD

Pitfield, a close associate of former prime minister Pierre Trudeau, was replaced this summer by the new Progressive Conservative government after occupying the key Privy Council slot since 1975. He is currently designing government study programs at Harvard University.

He warned his audience to be on guard against influential people who ridicule politicians or civil servants and claim to have instant solutions.

"These individuals — comparatively few but in protected, powerful, privileged and essentially irresponsible positions — are aggrandizing themselves by demeaning people and institutions truly devoted to serving you," he said.

But sacrificing none of the discretion acquired in 20 years as an Ottawa mandarin, the angular Pitfield refused to identify for reporters the people he was attacking.

"Identify them for yourselves," he said. "I'm simply criticizing people who fit that description."

Alberta to corral street cowboys

EDMONTON (UPC) — The day of the flashy roadster with a jacked-up rear and oversized "slicks" is cruising to an end, at least in Alberta.

Transportation Minister Henry Kroeger said Monday the government plans a new Highway Traffic Act which will bring motorists in this western province "back down to earth."

Regulations in the new act, slated to be introduced in the Alberta legislature Oct. 22, will control the height of rear bumpers on cars.

The minister, who unveiled the new rules at an Alberta Urban Municipalites convention in Jasper last Friday, says lower rear bumpers will make it more difficult for motorists to install "slicks" — outsized tires.

Kroeger admits he has a personal interest in changing the law. He caved in the grille of his own car attempting to parallel park around a jacked-up car.

However, the minister maintains his intent is unselfish. "What we're trying to do is get the cars to conform with Canadian safety standards," he said, adding that the high rear ends are dangerous because they expose gas tanks and create a potential explosion hazard.

Eh, boss, get your own coffee!

TORONTO (CP) — An arbitration award which said secretaries do not have to get coffee for their bosses will encourage women to refuse such demands in the future, says the executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress said Monday.

Shirley Carr was commenting on an award which upheld the grievance of a former employee of York University whose boss asked her to get him a coffee.

"It gives women self assurance to know that it isn't necessary to run and get the coffee," Carr said in a interview Monday. "I'm delighted with the award."

Requiring secretaries to get coffee for their employers is symbolic of women not being accepted as equal to their male bosses, said Marnie Clarke, director of the provincial labor ministry's women's bureau.

"It's a question of basic human rights," she said. "We are in a transitional period and very often women employees are expected to behave in a manner in which they no longer feel comfortable."

SC, absent Liberals keep Tories afloat

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Progressive Conservative government squeaked through its second non-confidence motion in less than a week Monday — thanks to Social Credit support and 10 absent Liberals.

A total of 132 Tories combined with the five Social Crediters to defeat a Liberal motion in the Commons condemning government plans to put a portion of Petro-Canada into private hands by a vote of 137 to 128. The 26-member NDP caucus supported the 102 voting Liberals.

After the vote, Conservatives and New Democrats said enough Liberals purposely stayed away to assure the Tories were not defeated.

Liberals denied this. A spokesman said they wanted all their members to vote, but some stayed away and some could not attend. Four were paired off with four absent Tories.

The spokesman said the Liberals were prepared to defeat the government over the issue.

Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said his party would move another non-confidence motion today, the subject to be announced. It will be voted on Wednesday.

Monday's vote came hours after a federal study group released a report recommending that shares of the government-owned oil company be distributed free to every eligible Canadian, a proposition both New Democrats and Liberals said they would strongly oppose.

Prime Minister Joe Clark refused to say whether the government would adopt the recommendation. But he promised opposition party spokesmen in the Commons there would be no change without legislation in the corporate structure of the Crown corporation.

Government officials said it will be some weeks before Canadians will find out what the government intends to do about it.

Neither Clark nor Trudeau expressed surprise at the outcome of the vote. "I'm a realist," said Trudeau.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, citing the number of Liberal absentees, said: "It's clear the Liberals weren't serious."

The NDP leader, who saw his own party's non-confidence motion over Petro-Canada easily defeated in the Commons last Thursday, predicted a major Petro-Canada battle when Clark introduces his legislation.

The NDP motion, which was stronger than the Liberals', was defeated 223 to 27. With the exception of one member, the Liberals voted with the government.

The government's survival of the non-confidence motion was virtually assured earlier Monday when Social Crediter Adrian Lambert said the party's five members would vote with the government.

But Lambert, member for the Quebec riding of Bellechasse, indicated Social Credit support on energy matters could not be taken for granted in the future.

The report on the disposal of Petro-Canada was prepared by a four-member study group and tabled in the Commons by Clark on Monday. Most of its contents were leaked by Broadbent during the weekend.

Clark said the proposal to allow Canadians to apply for free common shares is only one of number of options the Conservatives will review.

The committee, headed by Donald McDougall, outgoing president of Labatt Brewing Co. Ltd., said giving shares away was the least complex way of distributing ownership in the corporation. It also would ensure Canadian ownership of Petro-Canada.

The committee estimated the plan could not be in place before the end of 1980 even if the recommendations were accepted in the near future.

The study group also said a new government agency should be set up to assist in activities such as the negotiation of state-to-state contracts for crude oil imports and to promote exploration and research and development of heavy oil.

But it recommended the government pursue the opportunity to establish a major private self-supporting petroleum company which is profitable and broadly owned by the Canadian people.

That would require strengthening Petro-Canada financially and restructuring its corporate organization, the report said.

Petro-Canada's assets now are valued at $3.3 billion, representing a dramatic increase in the firm's growth since it was established by the former Liberal government.

Chairman MacDougall said at a news conference the oil company as it now exists has been working at cross purposes.

He said the objectives of the company are not clearly stated and it is charged with the conflicting responsibilities of serving broad national objectives — such as frontier and off-shore oil exploration — and at the same time showing a profit.

Food price spiral blamed on unions

Researchers for the $3 million legislative inquiry into the food industry say unions rather than monopoly control are to blame for high food prices.

The research group for the select standing committee on agriculture released a report Monday that notes two wholesalers — Kelly Douglas and H.Y. Louie — control 93 per cent of the province's wholesale food trade.

But monopoly control is not a matter of pressing concern in its impact on retail prices, the report concludes.

To create a more competitive climate, the report says, the government should:

—Let retailers and wholesalers hire temporary help during strikes.

—Disallow the secondary picketing provisions of the labor code.

—Prevent shopping centre owners from imposing restrictive leasing arrangements that keep malls free of competing stores.

—Ask the consumer and corporate affairs ministry to start monitoring retail food prices.

"The largest operating cost (of retailers) is associated with labor, with over half of a retailer's gross margin being used to cover wages, salaries and fringe benefits," the report says.

"Because of potential disruptions to the established shopping habits of his clientele, when a retailer is faced with union negotiations, in spite of a desire to hold costs down, it may be more desirable to settle at whatever cost rather than incur financial loss due to store closure during a strike.

"In recent years, the length of union contracts and the time lapse between settlements of union contracts for different unions — that is, union locals in different areas of the province — has shortened considerably.

"Thus, the first major retailer who has to settle a union contract is virtually assured that his competitors will likewise have to settle union contracts at the same level and within a relatively short period of time."

Because one major retailer, Woodward's Stores, is not unionized, complete bargaining solidarity in the retail food business does not exist, the report says.

As a result, an incentive exists to settle wage negotiations at whatever level is necessary, with consumers forced to suffer resulting increases in food costs.

"That's typical, isn't it?" said Meatcutters' Union business agent Leif Hansen.

Hansen said today he has not had an opportunity to read the report, but indicated his union isn't going to lose too much sleep over the suggestions.

"Our worry is that this thing will get blown out of proportion," he said.

Hansen refused to comment further until he's had a chance to analyze the findings.

The legislative committee which commissioned the series of reports — there were nearly 100 in all — has been inoperative since the spring.

The Socred committee chairman, Len Bawtree, was defeated in the May 10 provincial election and no new committee was formed.

Much of the researchers' material was discredited by people involved in the industry and by the NDP members of the committee who boycotted some of the committee's last meetings.

Few if any of the recommendations contained in the series of reports from the $3 million, two-year study were ever acted on.

Mexico border earthquake sways skyscrapers in L.A.

Times News Services

A powerful earthquake struck southern California and part of Mexico on Monday, buckling buildings, wrecking water systems and swaying skyscrapers as far away as Las Vegas and Los Angeles. At least 76 persons were injured, authorities said.

One death was reported in Mexicali, Mexico, but there were no confirmed reports of deaths in California. The five-second earthquake was the strongest in the Imperial Valley since 1940, the U.S. Geological Survey said.

Seismologists at California Institute of Technology in Pasadena said the 4:16 p.m. quake, measuring 6.4 on the Richter scale and centred 16 kilometres east of Calexico, Calif., on the Mexican border, was followed by a series of aftershocks measuring more than 3.0 on the Richter scale. The National Earthquake Centre in Golden, Colo., measured the major quake at 6.5.

The earthquake was felt as far north as Los Angeles, 240 kilometres from the epicentre — jostling the 62-storey United California Bank building downtown — and in the high-rise hotels on the Las Vegas Strip.

El Centro Police Sgt. Max Richardson and Imperial County sheriff's deputies said at least 60 persons with minor injuries were being treated at three hospitals — Calexico, El Centro Community and Pioneer Memorial hospitals in nearby Brawley.

The Imperial County fire department declared a state of emergency. At least 20 rural bridges were reported wrecked in the valley, and the roofs of many houses collapsed.

Everett Blizzard, deputy director of the state Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento, said there was "major damage" to the All-American Canal. The canal is a major supplier of water for the region's crops.

Across the border in Mexicali a Red Cross official said one person was killed and 16 others were injured.

At about the same time, a moderate earthquake rocked Kyoto and its vicinity halting the service of "bullet trains" between the ancient Japanese city and Tokyo. There were no reports of casualties or property damage.

Supertanker oil disaster 'now certain'

Times News Services

An oil spill on the British Columbia coast from Alaska oil supertankers is now inevitable, John Fraser, federal environment minister, said Monday.

The risk of a major spill off the West Coast increased dramatically Monday when Foothills Oil Pipe Line Co. decided to pull out of a competition to transport Alaskan oil to the United States, he said.

Foothills told the National Energy Board at hearings in Vancouver that it is withdrawing its overland pipeline proposal because there were too many objections to be ironed out in time for President Jimmy Carter to make his choice.

The Calgary-based company proposed a pipeline route along the Alaska Highway from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Edmonton and then Chicago.

Prime Minister Clark told the Commons today he regrets Foothills' decision.

Foothills withdrew its proposal about the same time as an announcement in Washington that U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus is putting his support behind use of tankers to move the oil to the U.S. and is rejecting pipeline routes through Canada.

In favoring the Northern Tier Pipeline option, which Canada opposes on environmental grounds, Andrus fell in with the U.S. departments of energy and agriculture, two northern states, and at least 66 congressmen.

President Carter, who meets with Clark next month in Ottawa, must make the final decision, but the odds now are heavily stacked in Northern Tier's favor.

A common theme among the project's supporters is that the pipeline, with a $1.6 billion price tag, assures "security" of supply because it does not pass through Canadian territory.

Of the three companies battling for the right to move the oil, only Foothills had proposed a total overland route. The other two — Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. Ltd. of Canada and the U.S.-based Northern Tier — propose moving oil by tanker from Alaska to Washington.

Oil tankers already sail West Coast waters, but "environmental hazards obviously go up if you increase the tanker traffic," Fraser said. "The only thing remaining is the question of what is the best for Canada — Trans Mountain or Northern Tier?"

"In my opinion, Northern Tier is the worse of those two options."

Fraser said the Northern Tier plans calls for supertankers to enter the Strait of Juan de Fuca, between the Mother, son killed by truck

Sidney RCMP today identified the victims of a fatal traffic accident in the 700-block Birch Road in North Saanich Monday as a mother and her young son.

Dead are Mrs. Carolyn Lee Stansal, 31, and her 17-month-old son, Benjamin of 720 Birch.

Police said the two were walking beside the road about noon when they were struck by a one-ton, flatbed truck driven by William Ellis, 38, address not known.

Ellis was taken to Saanich Peninsula Hospital where he is listed in good condition today recovering from chest injuries.

An inquest is expected to be held but no date has been set as yet.

Meanwhile, a 22-year-old man was killed Monday night when his car plowed off the road on a curve near Comox.

RCMP said Daniel Lebel was killed instantly. An unidentified passenger was treated in hospital for minor injuries.

Pilot, both passengers killed in Cessna crash

The bodies of three Victoria residents were found Monday at the scene of an air crash at the 5,000 feet level of an unnamed mountain east of Powell River.

Dead are the aircraft's pilot, Rev. Donald Moe, and passengers Mary Ellen Kingsfield and Valerie Wuerch.

All were members of the Church of the Way, 1176 Craigflower, and were on a flight from Victoria to Campbell River to establish a new church in the north Vancouver Island community.

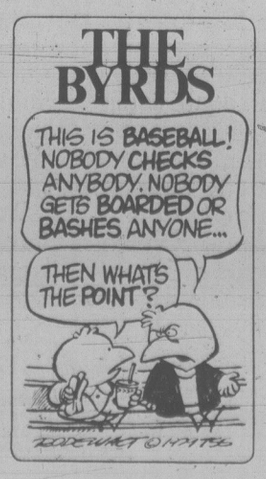
The plane was reported missing Sunday after it left on the one-hour flight.

It was due to land at Campbell River at 11 a.m. The wreckage was spotted about 9 a.m. on Monday.

Aircraft from 442 and 407 squadrons at CFB Comox took part in the search.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre said weather in the area was partly cloudy with rain showers and some fog over the Strait of Georgia.



Poor example

LONDON (AP) — The Financial Times says a 13-year-old boy at Eton, one of Britain's most important prep schools, wrote the following lines about poverty as part of a class assignment: "There was once a very poor family. The father was poor, the mother was poor, the children were poor. Even the butler was poor."

The Irish are pigs, says the princess

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Princess Margaret has made a second royal gaffe during her Chicago visit, calling the Irish "pigs" in front of the city's Irish mayor, Jane Byrne, according to the Sun Times.

The newspaper said the princess was seated at the same table as Mrs. Byrne at a weekend party when the mayor mentioned she had attended the funeral of Lord Louis Mountbatten, assassinated by the Irish Republican Army. Mountbatten was a relative and beloved figure of British royalty.

MARGARET
. . . offends mayor

Princess Margaret said: "The Irish. They're pigs."

Then, catching herself, she added: "Oh-oh, you're Irish."

The mayor was not available for comment.

The newspaper reported Monday that Princess Margaret, when talking at a media reception Friday, asked if Richard Daley were still mayor of Chicago. Daley, mayor for 21 years, died in December, 1976. Mrs Byrne was elected last April.

Oil disaster 'now sure'

Trans Mountain's plan will see tankers shipping oil from Valdez, Alaska, to Low Point, on the west coast of Washington.

However, it's up to the U.S. government to decide which project will be approved, he said.

The Canadian government will talk to Washington and try to obtain the route with the least environmental impact, Fraser said.

The prime minister will announce in the near future how Canada plans to get the U.S. to modify its thinking, he indicated.

David Anderson, an ex-MP and former leader of the B.C. Liberal party, a long-time opponent of tanker traffic off the west coast, was quoted as saying he was sure President Carter would accept the Northern Tier proposal.

Anderson said Ottawa and B.C. must now lobby hard for location of oilport facilities at Low Point, rather than Port Angeles, and for U.S. legislation compelling the four major oil companies to tie into the port by pipeline, thus lessening the likelihood of environmental damage.

B.C. Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said he today that, as it appeared the all-land route was being scrapped, he now favors the Trans Mountain proposal.

Food bill hits $58.91

OTTAWA (CP) — The average household spent $58.97 a week for food last year, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The federal agency conducted a survey of 7,400 households in 16 major metropolitan areas. Full results will not be available until early 1980.

Advance information shows food spending for all families and unattached individuals was $58.97, while weekly expenditures for families with two or more members was $66.48.

Latest monthly figures from the department of agriculture released two weeks ago show that it cost $61.49, according to government nutrition experts, to provide a basic healthy diet for a family of four during September.

Three-train pileup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — At least 350 persons were reported injured today in a chain-reaction crash of commuter trains that sent riders tumbling down the aisles. There was no word on fatalities.

"All hell broke loose," said a passenger aboard one train which slammed into a parked train and shoved it into a third train on the Media-West Chester Line.

Most of the injuries appeared to involve cuts, bruises and broken bones.

"We ran into the two-car express from West Chester which had stopped for a train in front," an engineer for Conrail, which operates the commuter service said.

"We just plowed into the back of it and all hell broke loose. There were hundreds of people standing in the aisles and they tumbled all over from the collision.

"We were going at a good clip, 40 to 45 miles an hour. We started flying when the engineer hit the brakes. Most of the people hit their heads and faces on the seats in front of them. I hit the front seat square on the chin. Boy, did it hurt."

A Conrail official said the three trains involved in the impact could have carried as many as 1,200 people.
